Memoirs of Service Afloat, During the War Between the States Raphael Semmes,2012-11-21

A NUMBER of publications have appeared first and last concerning the author and his career as was naturally to have been expected The Alabama was the first steamship in the history of the world the defective little Sumter excepted that was let loose against the commerce of a great commercial people The destruction which she caused was enormous She not only alarmed the enemy but she alarmed all the other nations of the earth which had commerce afloat as they could not be sure that a similar scourge at some future time might not be let loose against themselves The Alabama in consequence became famous It was the fame of steam As a matter of course she attracted the attention of the book makers those cormorants ever on the lookout for a speculation A number of ambitious literateurs entered the seductive field But it was easier as they soon found to enter the field than to explore it and these penny a liners all made miserable failures not even excepting the London house of Saunders Otley Co to whom the author was induced to loan his journals in the hope that something worthy of his career might be produced To those who have chanced to see the Log of the Sumter and Alabama produced by that house it will be unnecessary to say that the author had no hand in its preparation He did not write a line for it nor had he any interest whatever in the sale of it as the loan of his journals had been entirely gratuitous So far as his own career was concerned the author would gladly have devolved the labor of the historian on other shoulders if this had been possible But it did not seem to be possible after the experiments that had been made With all the facilities afforded the London house referred to a meagre and barren record was the result The cause is sufficiently obvious The cruise of a ship is a biography The ship becomes a personification She not only walks the waters like a thing of life but she speaks in moving accents to those capable of interpreting her But her interpreter must be a seaman and not a landsman He must not only be a seaman he must have made the identical cruise which he undertakes to describe It will be seen hence that the career of the author was a sealed book to all but himself A landsman could not even interpret his journals written frequently in the hieroglyphics of the sea A line or a bare mark made by himself which to other eyes would be meaningless would for him be fraught with the inspiration of whole pages
