Planning For Education In Pakistan A Personal Case Study:

Planning for Education in Pakistan Adam Curle,1966 Educational planning for developing countries is a much more strenuous and unpredictable enterprise than its name suggests Among its hazards are the mental and physical strain including illness to which the foreign adviser is subject the often critical absence of data the instability of the economy and particularly the idiosyncrasies of politicians and administrators Through his own experience as a consultant to developing nations Mr Curle became intimately familiar with the problems and responsibilities of the foreign expert In his wryly realistic view the advisor far from being a remote and godlike figure is thrust in the middle of confusing and often frustrating conditions He emphasizes the need for wisdom and common sense on the advisers part and gives a thoroughly practical appraisal of what accomplishments can be reasonably expected Mr Curle deals extensively with the state of education in Pakistan where he was an adviser off and on for ten years

The Developing World and State Education Dave Hill, Ellen Roskam,2009-01-13 Neoliberalism has had a major impact on schooling and education in the Developing World with social repercussions that have affected the salaries of teachers the number and type of potential students the availability of education the cost of education and more This edited collection argues that the privatization of public services and the capitalization and commodification of education have resulted in the establishment of competitive markets that are marked by selection exclusion and inequality The contributors academics and organization social movement activists examine aspects of neoliberal arguments focusing on low and middle income countries including Chile Mexico Argentina Venezuela China Pakistan India Turkey Burkina Faso Mozambique and South Africa and suggest where they fall short Their arguments center around the assumption that education is not a commodity to be bought and sold as education and the capitalist market hold opposing goals motivations methods and standards of excellence

A comparative study of elite English-medium schools, public schools, and Islamic madaris in contemporary Pakistan Akhtar Hassan Malik,2015-04-12 This ethnographic study examines the role of differing school knowledge in reproducing various social classes in the society It was observed that an unequal availability of capital resources agents class habitus and the type of their cultural currency act as selection mechanisms that clearly favour some social groups over others The ruling classes ensure the transfer of their power and privilege to their children by providing them with quality education in elite schools The disadvantaged classes are excluded from these unique institutions by both social and economic sanctions They have no other option than to educate their children either in public schools or Islamic madaris As a result inequitable educational opportunities consolidate the existing social class hierarchy
