Racing The Antelope What Animals Can Teach Us About Running And Life:

Racing the Antelope Bernd Heinrich, 2001-04-24 Racing the Antelope The human experience is populated by dreams and aspirations For me the animal totem of these dreams is the antelope swift strong and elusive we chase after antelope and sometimes we catch them Often we don't But why do we bother I think it is because without dream antelopes to chase we become what a lapdog is to a wolf And we are inherently more like wolves than lapdogs because the communal chase is part of our biological makeup In 1981 Bernd Heinrich a lifelong runner decided to test his limits at age forty one and race in the North American 100 Kilometer Championship race in Chicago To improve his own preparations as a runner he wondered what he could learn from other animals what makes us different and how we are the same and what new perspective these lessons could shed on human evolution A biologist and award winning nature writer he considered the flight endurance of insects and birds the antelope's running prowess and limitations the ultraendurance of the camel and the remarkable sprinting and jumping skills of frogs Exploring how biological adaptations have granted these creatures superhuman abilities he looked at how human physiology can or cannot replicate these adaptations Drawing on his observations and knowledge of animal physiology and behavior Heinrich ran the race and the results surprised everyone himself most of all In Racing the Antelope Heinrich applies his characteristic blend of scientific inquiry and philosophical musing to a deft exploration of the human desire even need to run His rich prose reveals what endurance athletes can learn about the body and the spirit from other athletes in the animal kingdom He then takes you into the heart of his own grueling 100 kilometer ultramarathon where he puts into practice all that he has discovered about the physical spiritual and primal drive to win At once lyrical and scientific Racing the Antelope melds a unique blend of biology anthropology psychology and philosophy with Heinrich's passion for running to discover how and why we run

Running in the Zone Steve King, Dan Cumming, 2006-09-01 Twenty six runners ranging in age from 46 to 76 share their secrets motivations and experiences in the fields of running All are active runners and many presently hold world age class records Some have held world records and have achieved world level performances at the Olympics Commonwealth and European games But Running in the Zone isn't about super achievement it is about getting the most out of the running experience regardless of age or even ability This book is for anyone interested in running and running related sports whether they are elite age class runners wanting to keep up performances or newcomers considering taking up running in their middle or even advanced years Many of the contributors didn't start running until they were over 40 and some didn't achieve their best personal performances until they were in their 50s You will meet men and women who have a life long interest in running as well as those who took it up as personal challenges All are inspiring in one way or another and have something valuable to teach not necessarily about running per se but rather personal satisfaction giving back through voluntarism and commitment to a goal or purpose The book was the idea of editors Steve King and Dan Cumming and has come together through Steve's contacts in the world of running and Dan's love of running and editorial ability to pull the best out of a story Both Steve and Dan have a long term relationship with the sport They both perceived that a growing number of older runners are involved in the running and that Running in the Zone would answer many of the needs of this group of active men and women helping them to get the best out of one of the most fundamental of athletic endeavors For more information visit authors blog www.runninginthezone.ca

Wilson offers a luminous Kirkus Reviews reflection on the humanities and their integral relationship to science Both endeavors Wilson argues have their roots in human creativity the defining trait of our species By studying fields as diverse as paleontology evolution and neurobiology Wilson demonstrates that creative expression began not 10 000 years ago as we have long assumed but more than 100 000 years ago in the Paleolithic Age A provocative investigation into what it means to be human The Origins of Creativity reveals how the humanities have played an unexamined role in defining our species With the eloquence optimism and pioneering inquiry we have come to expect from our leading biologist Wilson proposes a transformational Third Enlightenment in which the blending of science and humanities will enable a deeper understanding of our human condition and how it ultimately originated
