Nyroos, Johan Korhonen, Riikka Mononen, 2022-11-10 Both domain general e.g. working memory executive functions and domain specific e.g. number processing phonological processing cognitive factors have been found to predict learning in different age groups. Likewise research has shown that various affective factors such as different emotions e.g. anxiety self concept and interest need to be considered when investigating individual differences in learning. However few studies have investigated both cognitive and affective factors simultaneously in relation to learning. In particular there is a lack of studies investigating the interplay i.e. moderation and mediation between cognitive and affective factors on learning. The goal of this Research Topic is to deepen our knowledge on the relations between learning and both cognitive and affective factors in different age groups. We aim to provide a broad scope of emerging areas in research on cognitive and affective factors especially related to academic learning e.g. mathematics reading and other school subjects. Studies focusing simultaneously looking at the interplay of these constructs as well as longitudinally are of great interest. Further we are interested in innovative study designs and recent advances in methodology in this field. To promote quality education for all and equity in education cognitive and affective factors related to aspects of learning ranging from pre school to tertiary provision and inclusion of individuals with special educational needs are of interest. Resources in Education, 1999-04 New

Focussing its discussion within the context of mathematics education it argues that while research generated insights can have beneficial effects on learning and teaching the question of how these effects are to be generated and sustained is far from evident. The question of how to turn research into educational improvement is discussed here in the context of learning and teaching hindered by poverty and social injustice. In the first part of the book four teams of researchers use different methodologies while analysing the same corpus of data collected in a South African mathematics classroom In the second part each of these teams makes a specific proposal about what can be done and how so that its research generated insights have a tangible beneficial impact on what is happening in mathematical classrooms Combining two discourses that of researchers speaking to one another and that of researchers communicating their insights to those responsible for educational practice the book deals with the perennial question of communication between those who study educational processes and those who are directly responsible for teacher education educational research and classroom practices This book will be key reading for postgraduates researchers and academics in education and particularly in the areas of mathematics education education research teacher education and classroom practice It will also appeal to teacher educators practitioners and undergraduate students interested in educational research ENC Focus ,2000
