Resolving Development Disputes Through Negotiation:

Resolving Development Disputes Through Negotiations Timothy J. Sullivan, 2012-12-06 In the last decade disputes between developers and local communities over proposed construction projects have led to increasing litigation. Environmental legislation in particular has greatly enhanced the rights and powers of organized groups that desire to participate in local development decisions. These powers have allowed citizen groups to block undesired and socially unacceptable projects such as highways through urban areas and sprawling suburban developments. At the same time these powers have produced a collective inability to construct many needed projects that produce adverse local impacts. Prisons, airports, hospitals, waste treatment plants, and energy facilities all face years of litigation before a final decision. At times prolonged litigation has produced especially high costs to all participants. Despite these new powers, citizen action has often been limited to participation in public hearings or adjudicatory proceedings. Typically this occurs so late in the decision process that citizen input has very little effect in shaping a project's design. Those who dislike some element of a project often have little choice other than to oppose the entire project through litigation.

Multi-Party Dispute Resolution, Democracy and Decision-Making Carrie Menkel-Meadow, 2017-05-15 The articles selected for this volume draw on game theory, political science, psychology, sociology, and anthropology to consider how the process of dispute resolution is altered, challenged, and made more complex by the presence of multiple parties and/or multiple issues. The volume explores issues of coalition formation, defection, collaboration, commitments, voting practices, and joint decision making in settings of increasing human complexity. Also included are examples of concrete uses of deliberative democracy processes taken from new applications of complex dispute resolution theory and practice. The selected essays represent the latest theoretical advances and challenges in the field and demonstrate attempts to use dispute resolution theory in a wide variety of settings such as political decision making and policy formation, regulatory matters, environmental disputes, healthcare, community disputes, constitutional formation, and in many other controversial issues in the polity.

Environmental Dispute Resolution Lawrence S. Bacow, Michael Wheeler, 2013-06-29 This book has its origins in an MIT research project that was funded by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). Our immediate objective was to prepare a set of case studies that examined bargaining and negotiation as they occurred between government environmental advocates and regulatees throughout the traditional regulatory process. The project was part of a larger effort by the EPA to make environmental regulation more efficient and less litigious. The principal investigator for the research effort was Lawrence Suskind of the Department of Urban Studies and Planning. Eight case studies were prepared under the joint supervision of Suskind and the authors of this book. Studying the negotiating behavior of parties as we worked our way through an environmental dispute proved enlightening. We observed missed opportunities for settlement, negotiating tactics that backfired, and strategies that appeared to be grounded more in intuition than in thoughtful analysis. At the same time, however, we were struck by how often the parties ultimately managed to muddle through People negotiated not out of some idealistic commitment to consensus but because they thought it better served their own interests When some negotiations reached an impasse people improvised mediation These disputants succeeded in spite of legal and institutional barriers even though few of them had a sophisticated understanding of negotiation

Resolving Public Conflict E. Murphy, 2004-11-05 Tourism with its wide ranging impact needs to be managed effectively but how This book advocates taking a business approach to tourism that encourages greater collaboration between stakeholders in the practical assessment of tourism options The approach places key business management functions and stakeholders at the forefront of tourism initiatives The business management functions of planning organising leadership and control are the filters through which tourism opportunities are viewed while the stakeholder groups of customers residents industry and government set the agenda for appropriate tourism development Tourist destinations must engage in realistic assessments of their abilities to meet the needs and expectations of tourism stakeholders and then act on these assessments so their goals and objectives can be achieved A new model for bridging stakeholder gaps is presented as a template for how communities can understand and make the most of their tourism resources The Bridging Tourism Gaps Model is a practical tool to help destinations focus on the important factors in developing and maintaining tourism as a beneficial and vital part of their communities This book builds on the success of Tourism A Community Approach and the subsequent tourism planning experiences of both authors to advance strategic planning in tourism

Public Lands Conflict and Resolution Julia M. Wondolleck, 2013-06-29 The United States Forest Service perhaps more than any other federal agency has made great strides during the past two decades revolutionizing its public involvement efforts and reshaping its profile through the hiring of professionals in many disciplinary areas long absent in the agency In fact to a large extent the agency has been doing precisely what everyone has been clamoring for it to do involving the public more in its decisions hiring more wildlife biologists recreation specialists sociologists planners and individuals with people skills and furthermore taking a more comprehensive and long term view in planning the future of the national forests The result has been significant in some ways monumental changes in the agency and its land management practices There are provisions for public input in almost all aspects of national forest management today The professional disciplines represented throughout the agency's ranks are markedly more diverse than they have ever been Moreover no stone is left unturned in the agency's current forest planning effort undoubtedly the most comprehensive interdisciplinary planning effort ever undertaken by a resource agency in the United States Regardless of the dramatic change that has occurred in the U S Forest Service since the early 1970s the agency is still plagued by conflicts arising from dissatisfaction with how it is doing business

Routledge Revivals: The Design Professions and the Built Environment (1988) Paul L Knox, 2016-10-04 First published in 1988 this book argues that discussions of urban development often neglect to consider that much of the urban environment is designed by architects and planners and that the particular world view of architects and planners is crucial for the way proposals are taken up modified and carried out The author explores the world view of architects and planners considering their approach to design and the factors which influence this work patterns career paths and the firms in which they operate The author also studies their place in the political decision making process as it affects urban questions and then explores how architects and planners roles are changing

Environmental Law and American Business Joseph F. DiMento, 2013-06-29 We are in the second decade of modern environmental law By some indicators this body of regulation has matured greatly We can point to statutes and codes at the federal state and local levels which address almost every conceivable form of pollution and environmental insult Yet despite the existence of this large body of law despite considerable expenditures on enforcement and despite the energetic efforts of people sympathetic to environmental objectives violations are numerous Serious pollution problems are commonplace Love Canal the Valley of the Drums Times Beach and Stringfellow Acid Pits epitomize the national environmental quality challenge Daily a major illegal disposal of hazardous waste is recorded a new mismanaged dump site is discovered a toxic substance is found in our drinking water or a failure to meet a water or air quality standard is identified Many of these violations involve American business Failures to comply are of several types A small businessman in Pennsylvania mistakenly allows a spillover of a pollutant into a protected stream An industrialist in the Midwest adds to his fortune by illegally dumping dangerous chemicals A series of errors by several firms some of which no longer exist combine to create a health threatening conflagration on the West Coast An automobile company interprets one of the almost innumerable air pollution rules differently from government It produces a car which the government says fails to comply with the Clean Air Act

Democracy in a Technological Society Society for Philosophy & Technology (U.S.),1992-11-30 What is the relationship between democracy and technology And what should that relationship be This book explores these questions drawing upon a wide range of philosophical historical and sociological points of view In stark contrast to technology's promise as a wellspring of equality freedom and self government its development now poses a host of problems for political society an alarming concentration of power over global production a widening gap between rich and poor multiple environmental crises trivialization of politics in the mass media decline of citizen competence in decision making and the disproportionate influence of scientific and technical elites As the writers discuss these issues they investigate new avenues for democratic politics possibilities that emerge as modernist ideas about progress justice and the common good lose their ability to guide contemporary thought and action This book will be of interest to philosophers political scientists those doing research on technology and society engineers studying human factors environmental scientists sociologists
