Restoring The Nations Marine Environment:

Restoring the Nation's Marine Environment Gordon W. Thayer, 1992 Restoring and Protecting Marine Habitat Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Commission on Engineering and Technical Systems, Marine Board, 1994-02-01 Tremendous changes have occurred this century in the nation's coastal habitats in the way society views them and in the way they are managed This volume offers a complete highly readable assessment of how scientific knowledge and coastal engineering capabilities can be more effectively used to protect and restore marine habitat It addresses traditional and innovative uses of technology to protect remaining natural marine habitats to enhance or restore those that have been altered and to create marine habitat from lands used for other purposes The use of dredged materials as a vital resource in protection and restoration work is explored The book also explores organizational management and regulatory barriers to using the best available technology and engineering practice Specific options for improvements are offered in each area

Handbook of Ecological Restoration Martin R. Perrow, Anthony J. Davy, 2002-09-05 The two volumes of this handbook provide a comprehensive account of the emerging and vibrant science of the ecological restoration of both habitats and species Ecological restoration aims to achieve complete structural and functional self maintaining biological integrity following disturbance In practice any theoretical model is modified by a number of economic social and ecological constraints Consequently material that might be considered as rehabilitation enhancement reconstruction or re creation is also included Restoration in Practice provides details of state of the art restoration practice in a range of biomes within terrestrial and aquatic marine coastal and freshwater ecosystems Policy and legislative issues on all continents are also outlined and discussed The accompanying volume Principles of Restoration defines the underlying principles of restoration ecology The Handbook of Ecological Restoration will be an invaluable resource to anyone concerned with the restoration rehabilitation enhancement or creation of habitats in aquatic or terrestrial systems throughout the world Bedford Harbor

Creation, Restoration, and Conservation W.J. Mitsch, 2005-12-23 This book covers selected papers that were presented by participants at a Wetland Invitational held in Columbus Ohio USA in May 2003 They are divided by subject matter into four general categories 1 Restoration of a large river basin and delta 2 Long term wetland restoration 3 Creation of wetlands for mitigation of wetland loss 4 Conservation and restoration of the world's wetlands Provides key integrated long term assessments Covers a selection of the world's most significant wetlands Addresses management approaches for wetland conservation creation and restoration Marine Ecosystem Restoration (MER) - Challenges and New Horizons Brian Silliman, Avigdor Abelson, Christine Angelini, Gesche Krause, Megan Irene Saunders, Tjisse Van Der Heide, 2023-10-23

Worldwide marine ecosystems have been lost and degraded due to anthropogenic disturbances. For example, oyster reefs have declined by at least 85%, coral reefs by 19%, seagrasses by 29%, North American salt marshes by 42%, and mangroves by 35% from the early 19th century. Deepwater reefs and deep sea vents are not immune and have also been reduced in extent in many areas. Factors driving these losses include habitat destruction, pollution, invasive species, overfishing, trawling, mining, and more recently, climate change effects such as ocean warming, species range changes, and acidification. These habitat declines are occurring at a time when marine waters are being used at or near their maximum productive capacity to meet the contemporary needs of an ever-increasing human population. Because coastal and marine ecosystems generate some of the richest biodiversity hotspots on Earth and provide critical ecosystem services including storm protection, fisheries production, and carbon storage, over 1 billion US dollars have been spent globally in an attempt to halt and reverse observed declines. Early conservation efforts aimed at protecting these valuable and threatened habitats focused on reducing human impacts and physical stressors. However, with habitat degradation continuing and sometimes increasing in rate, it is now clear conservation alone will not be sufficient to protect and reestablish coastal ecosystems. Habitat restoration, although in existence for many decades, has recently been elevated as a new primary strategy to stem and even reverse coastal habitat loss. The call for increasing investment in restoration efforts has emerged with significant advances in propagule rearing and dispersion of habitat-forming organisms, e.g., oysters, seagrasses, corals. In addition, restoration resources are increasingly allocated by governments and/or large corporations with the aim to, for example, fix past landscape engineering efforts that had unintended environmental consequences. Such investments are being made to: i) provide jobs for those unemployed during economic downturns; ii) restore ecosystems destroyed by natural disasters and stressors; iii) increase coastal defense in response to increased frequency of intense storms; and/or iv) compensate for pollution and development-driven habitat degradation. Conservation practitioners have traditionally been skeptical to invest heavily in restoration at large scales because of the high cost per area (10,000–5,000,000 US$ ha for coastal vs. 500–5,000 US$ ha for terrestrial systems) to replant coastal ecosystems and/or the high chance that the restored ecosystems will not live long, e.g., outplanted corals. For restoration to be effective and employed as a primary method of coastal conservation at relevant scales, we must improve its efficiency, lower costs, and rapidly share and incorporate advances. One crucial step will be to identify when and where restoration attempts have been carried out according to state-of-the-art ecological theory and gauge their success. Another is generating synthesis studies that focus both within and across ecosystems to identify efficiencies, adaptations, and innovations. Work that shows theoretical and methodological innovations in specific ecosystems as well as across systems will be critical to pushing all fields of MER forward. Although there is rapidly increasing interest and investment, the field of marine ecosystem restoration is just beginning to undergo synthesis. Therefore, the aim of this Research Topic is to bring together research contributions to help address this synthesis need, provide a spotlight for recent innovations, enhance our understanding of successful methods in marine ecosystem restoration and promote integration of ecological sociological and engineering theory into restoration practices Wetland and Riparian Restoration Society for Ecological Restoration.

natural landscaping and ecological restoration techniques have become standard and successful practice throughout the nation. Now the Landscape Restoration Handbook Second Edition substantially widens the scope of the original work. Approximately 250 pages larger than the first edition, new and expanded chapters offer guidance on Development of natural landscaping and ecological restoration programs, Education, regional planning, and increased biological diversity. Ecological communities, species listings, Scientific and common plant names associated with ecological communities, Nurseries that propagate and sell native plants throughout the United States, Naturalization has proven to be a win-win situation all around. Monetary costs that landowners are saving on maintenance and chemicals also translates to environmental benefits for the greater community. Landscape and golf course architects, urban planners, horticulturists, golf course superintendents, and consultants have already put the Landscape Restoration Handbook to the test. Let the Second Edition bring you up to date on the numerous benefits of naturalization.

Volume 2: Marine Ecology Juan M. Molina, Gabriela E. Blasina, 2025-04-17

Marine systems face a multitude of anthropogenic stressors such as climate change, recreational and commercial fishing, aquaculture practices, pollution, and coastal urbanization. These stressors exert escalating pressure on marine ecosystems, leading to noticeable changes in habitat conditions as well as alterations in the abundance and diversity of their communities. Understanding the impacts of these stressors proves challenging due to their interactions with various factors such as species richness, environmental fluctuations, system openness, stressor tolerance, and the occurrence rate and intensity of each stressor. Therefore, a comprehensive analysis of the entire ecosystem is crucial. It is essential to consider the unique characteristics of each marine environment when assessing the cumulative stress that affects them. This book provides insights into the functioning of marine ecosystems and their responses to both natural and human-induced drivers within the framework of sustainable marine resource utilization. This book will make a valuable contribution to the scientific community, serving as a resource to inform decision makers and the general public about the current state of knowledge regarding the marine environment and the human footprints on our seas.
