

DEPRIVATION OF RIGHTS

Three-quarters of citizens of Montenegro assess that deprivation of right solely on the basis of some personal feature is not justified, with no exceptions, although one-fifth (21%) tends to claim that generally it is not justified, but there are circumstances when it is. Situation is almost identical as it was in 2016, and concerning as it points that this percentage of citizens still does not understand that there is no justification for discrimination.

■ It is not justified, with no exception ■ Mostly not justified, but there are circumstances when it is justified ■ Justified in the majority of cases

In your opinion, is it justified to deprive someone of a right (for instance, right to labour, to education, health care, use of their language, etc.) only on the basis of some personal feature (for example, based on nationality, religion, gender, age, sexual orientation, property status etc.)?

Human Rights Adam Etinson, 2018 Over the past decade or so philosophical speculation about human rights has tended to fall into two streams On the one hand there are Orthodox theorists who think of human rights as natural rights moral rights that we have simply in virtue of being human On the other hand there are Political theorists who think of human rights as rights that play a distinctive role or set of roles in modern international politics setting universal standards of political legitimacy serving as norms of international concern and or imposing limits on the exercise of national sovereignty This edited volume explores this disagreement its underlying sources and related issues in the philosophy of human rights Using the Orthodox Political debate as a springboard for broader reflection the volume covers a diverse range of questions about the relevance of the history of human rights to their philosophical comprehension how to properly understand the relationship between human rights morality and law how to balance the normative character of human rights their description of an ideal world with the requirement that they be feasible in the here and now the role of human rights in a world shaped by politics and power and how to reconcile the individualistic and communitarian aspects of human rights All chapters are accompanied by useful and probing commentaries which help to create dialogues throughout the entire volume

Reconstructing Human Rights Joe Hoover, 2016-05-27 We live in a human rights world The language of human rights claims and numerous human rights institutions shape almost all aspects of our political lives yet we struggle to know how to judge this development Scholars give us good reason to be both supportive and sceptical of the universal claims that human rights enable alternatively suggesting that they are pillars of cross cultural understanding of justice or the ideological justification of a violent and exclusionary global order All too often however our evaluations of our human rights world are not based on sustained consideration of their complex ambiguous and often contradictory consequences Reconstructing Human Rights argues that human rights are only as good as the ends they help us realise We must attend to what ethical principles actually do in the world to know their value So for human rights we need to consider how the identity of humanity and the concept of rights shape our thinking structure our political activity and contribute to social change Reconstructing Human Rights defends human rights as a tool that should enable us to challenge political authority and established constellations of political membership by making new claims possible Human rights mobilise the identity of humanity to make demands upon the terms of legitimate authority and challenges established political memberships In this work it is argued that this tool should be guided by a democratising ethos in pursuit of that enables claims for more democratic forms of politics and more inclusive political communities While this work directly engages with debates about human rights in philosophy and political theory in connecting our evaluations of the value of human rights to their worldly consequences it will also be of interest to scholars considering human rights across disciplines including Law Sociology and Anthropology
