Gender, Ethnicity, and Health Research Sana Loue, 1999-08-31 Health researchers routinely evaluate health and illness across subgroups defined by their sex gender ethnicity and race All too often these classifications are proffered as an explanation for any differences that may be detected for example in access to care frequency of disease or response to treatment Relatively few researchers however have examined what these classifications mean on a theoretical level or in the context of their own research Assume for example that a researcher concludes from his or her data that African Americans utilize certain surgical procedures less frequently than whites This conclusion may mean little without an examination of the various underlying issues Is there such a construct as race at all How were whites and African Americans classified as such Does this finding reflect inappropriate overutilization of the specific procedures among whites or inappropriate underutilization among African Americans To what extent are socioeconomic status and method of payment related to the less frequent use Are there differences in the manner in which health care providers present the various treatment options to whites and to African Americans that could account for these differences in utilization Are there differences in health care seeking and health care preferences between the two groups that would explain the difference in utilization Is the racial classification a surrogate measure for another variable that has remained unidentified and unmeasured All too often unfortunately such issues are ignored or lightly dismissed with an entreaty for additional research Race, Ethnicity, Gender and Other Social Characteristics as Factors in Health and Health Care Disparities Jennie Jacobs

Kronenfeld,2020-09-28 This volume investigates race ethnicity and gender as factors in health and health care Chapters focus on linkages to health disparities among races health experiences for incarcerated women and issues of hospital and health care spending Race, Gender and Health Literacy in the Medical Encounter Leslie Ann Miller,2016

 although there have been attempts to incorporate gender awareness in both health and employment policies the significance of gender in these areas continues to be marginalised within public debates and academic discourses Taking a social constructionist perspective Watts considers the ways in which gender impacts upon health in all its elements including
