PHILOSOPHY IN ANCIENT GREECE

1. What is Philosophy? Philosophy is all about asking big questions and trying to understand the world around us. Ancient Greek philosophers were like the "detectives" of their time, trying to figure out what is all around us, "why?" coming from the word "gno" meaning wisdom.

In the Socratic philosophers, who tried to find the fundamental principles of the world around us. Socrates in history, the Socratic method, which is a way of teaching by asking questions.

PLATO

Plato was a student of Socrates and a teacher of Aristotle. He was a philosopher who believed in the world of forms. He thought that the world we live in is just a shadow of a higher world of forms. He wrote many dialogues, including "The Republic" and "The Symposium".

Plato's Republic is a story about a city called "Kallipolis". It is a city where everyone is assigned a job based on their natural abilities. There are three main classes: the rulers, the guardians, and the producers. The rulers are the philosophers, the guardians are the warriors, and the producers are the farmers and craftsmen. Plato believed that this was the best way to organize a society.

Plato also wrote about the soul. He thought that the soul is made up of three parts: the rational part, the spirited part, and the appetitive part. The rational part is the part that should rule the soul, and it is the part that is closest to the world of forms. The spirited part is the part that gives us courage and honor, and the appetitive part is the part that gives us desires for food, drink, and sex.
