Regional Science in Developing Countries Manas Chatterji, Kaizong Yang, 2016-07-27 Developing countries are suffering from the multiple and overlapping problems of poverty malnutrition excessive population growth and also the increased environmental pollution due to rapid industrialization and urbanization particularly in the existing urban centres The migration from rural areas of agricultural population to urban areas is making this situation more problematic The lack of established institutions leads to the failure of public policy no matter how efficiently it is formulated The book discusses the major regional developmental problems in poor countries covering economic social and environmental problems It deals with case studies for a set of individual countries and discusses their unique problems investigating how the established methods of regional science can be used to solve some of these problems Development Studies in Regional Science

Management and Regional Science for Economic Development Manas Chatterji, 2011-10-13 The greatest challenge facing mankind today is the immense disparity in the levels of income among people in different parts of the globe The growth rate of income of the poor countries is consistently far below the rate of the advanced industrialized nations Due to low income and a high propensity to consume there is very little left in these countries for investment A major portion of the resources available is devoted to military expenditures This continual decline in the standard of living coupled with poverty and unemployment will lead to social and political upheaval in these countries which affects developed countries Because of high capacity and low population growth the market of the developed countries is already saturated To maintain the high standard of living in the developed countries it is necessary to have a strong and stable developing world It is gratifying to see that both groups of countries see the need for peaceful economic growth however the amount of cooperation between countries and the material help from the developed countries are far from satisfactory The economic and social scientists have investigated the best way to achieve the transformation from a poverty ridden condition to a decent existence Their studies have proceeded in two different directions One is a more descriptive historical analysis and the other is theoretical model building Although these studies have achieved a relatively high level of perfection one significant factor is sometimes missing Practices in Regional Science and Sustainable Regional Development R. M. Chatterji, P. van Rompuy, 2012-12-06 This second volume of proceedings of the International Conference on Regional Science Energy and Environment Louvain May 1975 contains papers related to general and partial equilibrium models of regional and urban development in which natural and human resources play a dominant role. It need not be stressed that environmental factors and resource management have to some extent been neglected in postwar economic research. Unfortunately a world wide energy crisis or more local environmental disruptions were necessary to draw the economist's attention on the increasing imbalance between man and environment. The topics treated in this volume reflect the shift in economic research which has taken place since the early seventies. They can be classified roughly into 4 fields. The first field deals with a welfare approach to environmental deterioration. The second area covers models of resource allocation that contain environmental constraints. The third class of problems focuses on the relationship between environment and urban development. Finally some methodological papers are included that explore new areas in regional and interregional model building. Klaassen opens this volume with a paper on the impact of rising energy prices on the structure of regional development and environment. He analyses the change in size of all potentials and the consequent decrease in the volume of traffic. Besides these short run influences a reallocation of households and firms may be expected in the long run.

Yoshiro Higano is the past president of the Regional Science Association International RSAI and the current president of the Japan Section of the RSAI JSRSAI. He also served as executive secretary for the Pacific Regional Science Conference Organizations PRSCO. This edited volume covers a wide range of regional science approaches: theory, policy evaluation, modeling, simulation and practice. Energy, Regional Science and Public Policy M. Chatterji, P. van Rompuy, 2012-12-06 For the last three decades space has become a significant dimension in social science analysis In many developed countries economic growth is slowing down and in some cases restrained due to environmental considerations and the real question is the optimum spread of development over space rather than the growth over time In the developing countries limited and uneven distribution of population and resources and the existence of heterogenous groups highlighted the need of balanced regional development The energy crisis and the realization that energy resources are very limited and unequally distributed have further emphasized its importance The expected impact and relocation due to energy shortages will have a crucial spatial dimension since manufacturing and service activities dependent on energy are concentrated in a few metropolitan regions connected by transportation communication and cultural factors Regional environment is also dependent on the spatial juxtaposition of activities and energy use The papers included in this volume address some of these considerations They were presented in the International Conference on Regional Science Energy and Environment held at Katholieke Universiteit te Leuven Belgium on May 1975 A second volume titled Environment Regional Science and Interregional Modeling published also by Springer Verlag contains research papers related to environment and space This book does not concern all facets of the energy situation In fact contributions on major oil producing countries U S S R East European and developing countries are not represented

Principles of Regional Science Zheng Wang, 2017-10-17 This book summarizes the research findings in regarding a region as a rational and abstract concept and explores the principles of regional science Focusing on location theory spatial dynamics and regional evolution theory it stresses that the region as a scientific concept is an essential abstract of an economic entity of a place While it introduces a number of case studies the content is general and universal rather than specific Beginning with location theory the basis of regional science it explains how regions breed their own characteristics as economic entities against a background of place For example it discusses the location theory of the tourism industry and analyzes issues of facility location and R D industry location theory The second part of the book addresses interactions with the spatial dynamics including the dynamic mechanism of regions against a background of space Spatial dynamics which includes concepts from statistical physics provides insights into the dynamic mechanism of aggregation diffusion and industrial clustering in regional science as well as in geography and economics The book then describes regional dynamics as a development of spatial dynamics REGION is completely independent as a research object and is no longer part of spatial dynamics This book also discusses in detail regions as the dynamic characteristics of the economy or the basic characteristics of a certain place and examines the theory of regional evolution It argues that regions are evolution and irreversible features of development with path dependence which are the characteristics of a region that differ from general economic phenomena This book by Professor Zheng Wang is outstanding

Its focus on Regional Science will open this area up to a wide variety of theoretical and applied researchers I recommend the work without reservations It covers critically important principles in the field and should be read and used by students faculty and applied researchers doing policy analysis I can see this as an important handbook and reference work as well as a textbook in the field Kingsley Haynes Appropriate Information System Design for Developing Countries Franklin J. K. Adolevi,1978 Tool Kits in Regional Science Michael Sonis,Geoffrey J. D. Hewings,2009-06-29 Regional Science is now more than 50 years old in the last two decades significant advances in methodology have occurred spurred in large part by access to computers The range of analytical techniques now available is enormous this books provides a sampling of the toolkit that is now at the disposal of analysts interested in understanding and interpreting the complexity of the spatial structure of sub national economies The set of tools ranges from the more traditional input output to new developments in computable general equilibrium models nonlinear dynamics neural modelling and innovation On The Road To Worldwide Science - Contributions To Science Development: A Reprint Volume M Moravesik,1989-03-01 This reprint volume compiles the works of the author on the building of science in developing countries The purpose of this volume is to improve the accessibility of the literature on science development for interested individuals especially in the Third World Countries
