Civil Society and Financial Regulation Lisa Kastner, 2017-10-12 Coalitions of consumer groups NGOs and trade unions have traditionally been considered politically weak compared to well organized and resourceful financial sector groups which dominate or capture financial regulatory decisions However following the 2008 financial crisis civil society groups have been seen to exert much more influence with politicians successfully implementing financial reform in spite of industry opposition Drawing on literature from social movement research and regulatory politics this book shows how diffuse interests were represented in financial regulatory overhauls in both the United States US and the European Union EU Four cases of reform in the post crisis regulatory context are analyzed the creation of a new Consumer Financial Protection Bureau in the US the introduction of new consumer protection regulations through EU directives the failure of attempts to introduce a financial transaction tax in the US and the agreement of 11 EU member states to introduce such a tax It shows how building coalitions with important elite allies outside and inside government helped traditionally weak interest groups transcend a lack of material resources to influence and shape regulatory policy By engaging with a less well known side of the debate it explains how business power was curbed and diverse interests translated into financial regulatory policy
