Imitating Christ in Magwi Todd D. Whitmore, 2019-01-24 Imitating Christ in Magwi An Anthropological Theology achieves two things First focusing on indigenous Roman Catholics in northern Uganda and South Sudan it is a detailed ethnography of how a community sustains hope in the midst of one of the most brutal wars in recent memory that between the Ugandan government and the rebel Lord s Resistance Army Whitmore finds that the belief that the spirit of Jesus Christ can enter into a person through such devotions as the Adoration of the Eucharist gave people the wherewithal to carry out striking works of mercy during the conflict and like Jesus of Nazareth to risk their lives in the process Traditional devotion leveraged radical witness Second Gospel Mimesis is a call for theology itself to be a practice of imitating Christ Such practice requires both living among people on the far margins of society Whitmore carried out his fieldwork in Internally Displaced Persons camps and articulating a theology that foregrounds the daily if extraordinary lives of people Here ethnography is not an add on to theological concepts rather ethnography is a way of doing theology and includes what anthropologists call thick description of lives of faith Unlike theology that draws only upon abstract concepts what Whitmore calls anthropological theology is consonant with the fact that God did indeed become human It may well involve risk to one s own life Whitmore had to leave Uganda for three years after writing an article critical of the President but that is what imitatio Christi sometimes requires

Nihilism and the Sublime Postmodern William Slocumbe, 2013-11-05 This book examines the relationship between nihilism and postmodernism in relation to the sublime and is divided into three parts history theory and praxis Arguing against the simplistic division in literary criticism between nihilism and the sublime the book demonstrates that both are clearly implicated with the Enlightenment Postmodernism as a product of the Enlightenment is therefore implicitly related to both nihilism and the sublime despite the fact that it is often characterised as either nihilistic or sublime Whereas prior forms of nihilism are modernist because they seek to codify reality postmodernism creates a new formulation of nihilism postmodern nihilism that is itself sublime This is explored in relation to a broad survey of postmodern literature in two chapters the first on aesthetics and the second on ethics It offers a coherent thesis for reappraising the relationship between nihilism and the sublime and grounds this argument with frequent references to postmodern literature making it a book suitable for both researchers and those more generally interested in postmodern literature

The Drift: Affect, Adaptation, and New Perspectives on Fidelity John Hodgkins, 2013-06-06 The Drift Affect Adaptation and New Perspectives on Fidelity offers a new perspective on the complex interrelations between literature and cinema It does so by articulating an affective turn for adaptation studies a field whose traditional focus has been the critical castigation of film adaptations of canonical plays or novels Drawing on theorists such as Gilles Deleuze Brian Massumi and Marco Abel the author is able to re-conceive literary and cinematic works as textual engines generating and circulating affect and the adaptive process as a drifting of those affective intensities from one medium to another By conceptualizing adaptation in this manner the work steers clear of the chimerical notion of fidelity to character to theme to narrative which has anchored so many analyses of adaptive texts over the years and the reproving language that inevitably attends it in favor of more productive avenues of investigation What affective work are certain literary and filmic texts performing What can this tell us more broadly about the underexplored affective dimensions of literature and cinema and the dialogic interactions between them The Drift addresses such questions through close careful readings which put a variety of realist modernist and postmodernist works into conversation with each other among them the fiction of John Dos Passos Don DeLillo and Susanna Moore the films of Dziga Vertov and Sergei Eisenstein as well as recent cinematic adaptations by Jane Campion and Charles Burnett This methodological approach helps to elevate adaptation studies into a discourse that speaks more directly and
