The Retention of Black Males in Ninth Grade Tracy Smith,2015-11-25 In the United States more students are being retained in the ninth grade than in any other year in their K 12 school experience In addition African American males are retained more than any other group Studies show that when students especially African American males are retained in ninth grade there is an increased probability that they will drop out and consequently fail to graduate from high school The limitation of the majority of the prior studies on ninth grade retention is their focus on urban districts Thus it is unknown if the probability of ninth grade retention and the impact of that setback is significant in suburban integrated settings where African Americans make up smaller yet emerging percentage of the student population While the gravity of these issues is documented there have been few studies on the barriers to the academic success of African American students in suburban integrated environments The purpose of this study is to examine the ninth grade experiences of African American males in a high school in a suburban community of New York City

Retention Pathways for African American Males Thaddeus L. Shubert, 2014 Author s abstract The purpose of this study was to assess the effects of a dropout prevention intervention on attitudes toward education among African American males in a rural alternative school in southeast Georgia as a means of understanding retention pathways for this population of students The researcher approach to retention personified the slogan Think Globally Act Locally by examining the nationwide dropout rate in the United States and implementing a dropout prevention program in a rural Georgia county African American males have an alarmingly high attrition rate at the middle school high school and college levels and so research on how to retain these students is needed Using a sample of 16 African American males enrolled in an alternative middle school the study investigated the influence of the Go to High School Go to College dropout prevention curriculum intervention on students attendance behavior and academic performance This quasi experimental study used a pre test and post test design with subjects serving as their own control Dependent variables included attendance behavior and academic performance The descriptive statistics were compared for each tool to determine changes in scoring before and after the intervention The findings of this study affirm that early prevention measures are essential to changing an adolescent's perception of the importance of persisting beyond high school graduation to the university college level. Students who learn to prioritize their academic pursuits in middle school are more prepared to overcome the academic and non-academic factors that led to attrition and to continue their education after high school graduation.

Black Male(d): Peril and Promise in the Education of African American Males Tyrone C. Howard, 2014 In his new book the author of the bestseller Why Race and Culture Matter in Schools examines the chronic underperformance of African American males in U.S. schools. Citing a plethora of disturbing academic outcomes for Black males, this book focuses on the historical, structural, educational, psychological, emotional, and cultural factors that influence the teaching and learning process for this student population. Howard discusses the potential and promise of Black males by highlighting their voices to generate new insights, create new knowledge, and identify useful practices that can significantly improve the schooling experiences and life chances of Black males. Howard calls for a paradigm shift in how we think about teaching and studying Black males. The book examines current structures, ideologies, and practices that both help and hinder the educational and social prospects of Black males, translates frequently cited theoretical principles into research-based classroom practice, documents teacher-student interactions, student viewpoints, and discusses the troubling role that sports plays in the lives of many Black males. It highlights voices and perspectives from Black male students about ways to improve their schooling experiences and outcomes and identifies community-based programs that are helping Black males succeed.

Recruiting, Retaining, and Engaging African-American Males at Selective Public Research Universities Louis A. Castenel, Tarek C. Grantham, Billy J. Hawkins, 2018-06-01 A problematic yet uncommon assumption among many higher education researchers is that recruitment, retention, and engagement of African American males is relatively similar and stable across all majority White colleges and universities. In fact, the harsh reality is that selective public research universities (SPRUs) have distinctive academic cultures that increase the difficulty of diversifying their faculty and student populations. This book will discuss how traditions and elitist assumptions make it very difficult to recruit, retain, and engage African American males. The authors will examine these issues from multiple perspectives in three sections that highlight research policies and practices impacting the experiences of African American males, including Pre-Collegiate Preparation, African American Male Student Athletes, and Undergraduate and Graduate Considerations for African American Male Initiatives.

College Student Self-Efficacy Research Studies Terence Hicks, Michael McFrazier, 2014-02-11 College Student Self-Efficacy Research Studies offers three uniquely designed sections that provide a unique mixture of research studies conducted on African American, Mexican American, and first-generation college students.
