

OPERATIONALISING ONE WELFARE' INTO GLOBAL POLICYMAKING TO PREVENT ZOO NOTIC DISEASE RISK

Wild animal health and welfare need to be prioritised as cross cutting themes in policymaking, accompanied by urgent reforms in international animal and public health laws

Human activities such as wildlife trade (both legal and illegal), live animal markets, intensive animal agriculture and fur farming inevitably lead to crowding, stress and injury among animals. The close proximity between people and animals during capture, farming, transportation, butchering and trade presents numerous and unpredictable opportunities for pathogens to spread and undergo mutations, leading to the emergence of zoonotic diseases with pandemic potential.

By focussing on primary prevention, One Welfare principles offer cross-disciplinary solutions to address the common drivers of biodiversity loss and climate change, and mobilise relevant sectors, disciplines and communities to reduce future zoonotic disease risk.

Reducing and eliminating high-risk human activities such as the taking, holding, trade, marketing, use and consumption of both wild and domestic animals that pose a risk to public health are vital to tackle the root causes of zoonotic disease transmission. Such mechanisms and measures to prevent pathogen emergence at source must be incorporated into the new global instrument negotiated under the World Health Organisation.

Curbing the emergence of zoonotic diseases is complex and requires a holistic approach. Measures to prevent the unsustainable exploitation of wildlife, and improvements in the enforcement and regulation of wildlife conservation, animal welfare and public health regulations, are also part of the solution.

It is estimated that 75% of Emerging Infectious Diseases are zoonotic and, of these, 70% originate in wildlife populations.

As estimated 1.7 million currently undiagnosed viruses are thought to exist in mammals and avian hosts, 24 thereof, 631,000–827,000 could have the ability to infect humans.

Pre-emptive measures – such as cracking down on the wildlife trade – would cost between $22bn and $31bn annually, a fraction of the economic cost of coping with a pandemic like Covid-19 (which is estimated at the time would cost $14 trillion by summer 2021).

Angel, Jacqueline L. Angel, 2009-07-25 In the United States work is the key to economic success as well as the major source of health care coverage and retirement security While Europeans look to the State for these benefits Americans for the most part do not This system of employment based benefits means that those disadvantaged in the labor market are also disadvantaged in terms of health care coverage and retirement security The authors of this work examine the overrepresentation of Mexican Americans in low wage or service sector jobs which rarely come with health insurance or retirement coverage At all ages Mexican Americans have lower rates of health insurance and retirement coverage than do other minority groups such as African Americans or other Hispanic groups Although employment in jobs that do not provide benefits is one major source of this disparity other factors including immigration history citizenship status and language proficiency further block opportunities for upward mobility within the Mexican American population In their analysis the authors work to deemphasize the popular cultural explanation for the economic disparities and focus on more practical policy based solutions In each chapter the authors identify and critique the factors that affect the economic security and health care access of individuals throughout the life course suggesting policies for reform This work will be of interest to anyone working in the fields of cultural studies public health and the sociology of work With the focus on real world causes for the problems as well as potential solutions policy makers will also find this informative book an essential resource
