Private Black Colleges At The Crossroads:

Private Black Colleges at the Crossroads Daniel C. Thompson, 1973-07-18 New Life for Historically Black Colleges and Universities Vann R. Newkirk, 2014-01-10

In December 2008 Georgia state senator Seth Harp ignited controversy when he proposed merging two historically Black colleges with nearby predominantly white colleges to save money. Less than a year later Mississippi governor Haley Barbour sought to unite Mississippi's three predominantly Black colleges. These efforts kindled renewed interest in historically Black colleges and universities (HBCUs) across the nation and the globe. In this study HBCU officials and faculty attempt to identify the challenges that HBCUs face, explore the historic origin of HBCU management systems and identify models of success that will improve the long-term viability of the HBCU. By analyzing HBCUs within a larger framework of American higher education and the cultural context in which HBCUs operate, these essays introduce a new paradigm in the quest to ensure that HBCUs continue to play an important role in the education of Americans of all races.

Historically Black Colleges and Universities Charles L. Betsey, 2017-07-12

Beginning in the 1830s public and private higher education institutions established to serve African Americans operated in Pennsylvania and Ohio, the Border States, and the states of the old Confederacy. Until recently, the vast majority of people of African descent who received post-secondary education in the United States did so in historically black institutions. Spurred on by financial and accreditation issues, litigation to assure compliance with court decisions, equal higher education opportunity for all citizens, and the role of race in admissions decisions, interest in the role, accomplishments, and future of Historically Black Colleges and Universities has been renewed. This volume touches upon these issues. Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) are a diverse group of 105 institutions. They vary in size from several hundred students to over 10,000. Prior to Brown v. Board of Education, 90 percent of African American postsecondary students were enrolled in HBCUs. Currently, the 105 HBCUs account for 3 percent of the nation's educational institutions, but they graduate about one quarter of African Americans receiving college degrees. The competition that HBCUs currently face in attracting and educating African American and other students presents both challenges and opportunities. Despite the fact that numerous studies have found that HBCUs are more effective at retaining and graduating African American students than predominately white colleges, HBCUs have serious detractors. Perhaps because of the increasing pressures on state governments to assure that public HBCUs receive comparable funding and provide programs that will attract a broader student population, several public HBCUs no longer serve primarily African American students. There is reason to believe, and it is the opinion of several contributors to this book, that in the changing higher education environment, HBCUs will not survive, particularly those that are.

Envisioning Black Colleges Marybeth Gasman, 2007-06-29. The multifaceted story of the UNCF Winner Outstanding Publication Award. American Educational Research Association. Etched into America's consciousness is the United Negro College Fund's phrase: "A mind is a terrible thing to waste." This book tells the story of the organization's efforts on behalf of black colleges against the backdrop of the cold war and the civil rights movement. Founded during the post World War II period as a successor to white philanthropic efforts, the UNCF nevertheless retained vestiges of outside control. In its early years, the organization was restrained in its critique of segregation and reluctant to lodge a challenge against institutional and cultural racism. Through cogent analysis of written and oral histories, archival documents, and the group's outreach and advertising campaigns, historian Marybeth Gasman examines the UNCF's struggle to create an identity apart from white benefactors and to evolve into a vehicle for black empowerment. The first history of the UNCF.

Envisioning Black Colleges draws attention to the significance of black colleges in higher education and the role they played in Americans' struggle for equality.

Boyce, 2023-10-19 Reassesses the career of Benner C Turner the polarizing African American president at South Carolina State during the civil rights era Travis D Boyce considers the full sweep of Benner C Turner's life and career in the context of the contrary pressures of white and Black authority Borrowing an expression from Michelle Obama's remarks to the 2016 Democratic National Convention Boyce casts Turner long serving president of South Carolina State University as a steady and measured leader who preserved the limited resources his historically Black institution possessed in the face of often hostile social political and economic power structures Previous accounts of Turner and his SC State presidency portray him as unwilling to criticize the state's white power structure and unable to contend with their open resistance to civil rights Boyce argues that the modern view of Turner flattens a complex terrain often relying selectively on hostile sources underplaying the political constraints on presidents of publicly funded HBCUs in the South Considering Turner in a richer context with a deep awareness of Turner s early life formative influences Boyce provides a more complete critical examination of his leadership in trying times Catalog of Copyright Entries.
