Land and Water Development Division,1991      AEZ in Asia Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,1994-01-01      Upland Rice Phool Chand Gupta,J. C. O'Toole,1986 Upland rice distribution Climate Landscape and soils Cropping systems Varietal improvement Soil management Land preparation and crop establishment Farm equipment Weed management Disease management Insect pest management Economics of upland rice production      The Physical Geography of Southeast Asia Avijit Gupta,2005-02-24 The Physical Geography of Southeast Asia examines the complex mosaic of physical environments which comprise Southeast Asia and the current environmental problems and management practices which have arisen in this part of the world The book is in three sections The first section introduces the basic environmental components geology landforms rivers vegetation and others across the entire region The second section discusses specific environments that are characteristic of this assemblage of continental and maritime landscapes volcanic islands coastal environment granitic terrains karst etc The third and final section illustrates the ecological relationship between the environment and people volcanic hazards urban environment coastal zone development coral reefs and others The physical environment of Southeast Asia is examined at different levels covering a world region that ranges from ancient stable landmasses to dynamic unstable plate boundaries from aged primary rainforests to brash vibrant resource demanding built environments Southeast Asia has been perceived as a laboratory for studying plate tectonics It is an assemblage of large river basins peninsulas and archipelagos and seas surrounded by islands It is an area of great physical variations where parts of the physical environment have been significantly degraded anthropogenically following rapid population growth and development In large parts of the region the forms and processes on land and offshore should no longer be seen as entirely natural As this book repeatedly illustrates plate tectonics and people are both important contributors to the physical geography of Southeast Asia The contributors to this volume are distinguished scholarly and have a long association with Southeast Asia The chapters are not only skilfully built on state of the art research findings but also include new material from the on going research activities of the authors The book goes beyond being the first comprehensive and detailed volume of the biophysical geography of Southeast Asia in that it also deals with the tropical environment and the relationship between environment and people in a rapidly developing world region      The Soils of Iran Mohammad Hassan Roozitalab, Hamid Siadat, Abbas Farshad, 2018-03-30 This unique book addresses Iran's extremely rich soil diversity and resources which have developed under various climatic conditions ranging from dry to humid conditions. Featuring contributions by a group of respected experts on Iranian soils and agriculture, it provides comprehensive information on the management approaches needed for sustainable soil utilization and conservation under such conditions and the attendant challenges. As such, it offers a valuable resource for anyone interested in soils and agriculture in Iran but also in other Middle East and North African countries with similar climatic conditions. The book contains 14 chapters which illustrate the long history of indigenous knowledge and soil research, climate, geology and geomorphology, vegetation cover, soil forming factors and processes, major soils properties and their classification. Furthermore, it presents past climate change and paleosols, agroecological zones, soil fertility, soil biology and biotechnology, human induced land degradation and soil management in space and time. In the end, major challenges facing the soil resources of the country are defined and recommendations are made to face the future challenges.

Olsen, 1991 The first of an eight volume series The Literature of the Agricultural Sciences, this book analyzes the trends in the published literature of agricultural economics and rural sociology during the past fifty years. It uses citation analysis and other bibliometric techniques to identify the primary journals, report series and monographs of current importance to the developed industrial countries as well as those in the Third World.      The Future Population of the World Wolfgang Lutz, 2013-11-05 The highly acclaimed The Future Population of the World contains the most authoritative assessment available of the extent to which population is likely to grow over the next 50 to 100 years. The book provides a thorough analysis of all the components of population change and translates these factors into a series of projections for the population of the world's regions. This revised and updated version incorporates completely new scenario projections based on updating starting values and revised assumptions plus several methodological improvements. It also contains the best currently available information on global trends in AIDS mortality and the first ever fully probabilistic world population projections. The projections given up to 2100 add important additional features to those of the UN and the World Bank: they show the impacts of alternative assumptions for all three components: mortality and migration as well as fertility; they explicitly take into account possible environmental limits to growth and for the first time they define confidence levels for global populations. Combining methodological innovation with overviews of the most recent data and literature, this updated edition of The Future Population of the World is sure to conform its reputation as the most comprehensive and
