Folk-taxonomies in Early English Earl R. Anderson, 2003 A folk taxonomy is a semantic field that represents the particular way in which a language imposes structure and order upon the myriad impressions of human experience and perception Thus for example the experience of color in modern English is structured around an inventory of twelve basic color terms but languages vary in the number of basic color terms used from thirteen or fourteen terms to as few as two or three Anthropological linguists have been interested in the comparative study of folk taxonomies across contemporary languages and in their studies they have sometimes proposed evolutionary models for the development and elaboration of these taxonomies The evolutionary models have implications for historical linguistics but there have been very few studies of the historical development of a folk taxonomy within a language or within a language family Folk Taxonomies in Early English undertakes this task for English and to some extent for the Germanic and Indo European language families The semantic fields studied are basic color terms seasons of the year geometric shapes the five senses the folk psychology of mind and soul and basic plant and animal life forms Anderson's emphasis is on folk taxonomies in Old and Middle English and also on the implications of semantic analysis for our reading of early English literary texts

The World of Myth David Adams Leeming, 1992-02-27 Hercules Zeus Thor Gilgamesh these are the figures that leap to mind when we think of myth But to David Leeming myths are more than stories of deities and fantastic beings from non Christian cultures Myth is at once the most particular and the most universal feature of civilization representing common concerns that each society voices in its own idiom Whether an Egyptian story of creation or the big bang theory of modern physics myth is metaphor mirroring our deepest sense of ourselves in relation to existence itself Now in The World of Myth Leeming provides a sweeping anthology of myths ranging from ancient Egypt and Greece to the Polynesian islands and modern science We read stories of great floods from the ancient Babylonians Hebrews Chinese and Mayans tales of apocalypse from India the Norse Christianity and modern science myths of the mother goddess from Native American Hopi culture and James Lovelock's Gaia Leeming has culled myths from Aztec Greek African Australian Aboriginal Japanese Moslem Hittite Celtic Chinese and Persian cultures offering one of the most wide ranging collections of what he calls the collective dreams of humanity More important he has organized these myths according to a number of themes comparing and contrasting how various societies have addressed similar concerns or have told similar stories In the section on dying gods for example both Odin and Jesus sacrifice themselves to renew the world each dying on a tree Such traditions he proposes may have their roots in societies of the distant past which would ritually sacrifice their kings to renew the tribe In The World of Myth David Leeming takes us on a journey not through a maze of falsehood but through a marvellous world of metaphor metaphor for the story of the relationship between the known and the unknown both around us and within us Fantastic tragic bizarre sometimes funny the myths he presents speak of the most fundamental human experience a part of what Joseph Campbell called the wonderful song of the soul's high adventure commentators who have treated the Chuang Tzu as a minor foray into relativism Chapter titles are re translated textual fragments are relocated and inauthentic outer miscellaneous chapters are carefully separated from the transformatory message of the authentic inner chapters Each of the inner chapters is shown to be a building block to the next so that they can only be understood as forming a developmental sequence In the end the reader is presented with a clear consistent and coherent view of the Chuang Tzu that is more in accord with its stature as a major philosophical work
