The Evolution of Rhythm Cognition: Timing in Music and Speech Andrea Ravignani, Henkjan Honing, Sonja A. Kotz, 2018-07-24 Human speech and music share a number of similarities and differences One of the closest similarities is their temporal nature as both i develop over time ii form sequences of temporal intervals possibly differing in duration and acoustical marking by different spectral properties which are perceived as a rhythm and iii generate metrical expectations Human brains are particularly efficient in perceiving producing and processing fine rhythmic information in music and speech However a number of critical questions remain to be answered Where does this human sensitivity for rhythm arise How did rhythm cognition develop in human evolution How did environmental rhythms affect the evolution of brain rhythms Which rhythm specific neural circuits are shared between speech and music or even with other domains Evolutionary processes long time scales often prevent direct observation understanding the psychology of rhythm and its evolution requires a close fitting integration of different perspectives First empirical observations of music and speech in the field are contrasted and generate testable hypotheses Experiments exploring linguistic and musical rhythm are performed across sensory modalities ages and animal species to address questions about domain specificity development and an evolutionary path of rhythm Finally experimental insights are integrated via synthetic modeling generating testable predictions about brain oscillations underlying rhythm cognition and its evolution Our understanding of the cognitive neurobiological and evolutionary bases of rhythm is rapidly increasing However researchers in different fields often work on parallel potentially converging strands with little mutual awareness This research topic builds a bridge across several disciplines focusing on the cognitive neuroscience of rhythm as an evolutionary process It includes contributions encompassing although not limited to 1 developmental and comparative studies of rhythm e g critical acquisition periods innateness 2 evidence of rhythmic behavior in other species both spontaneous and in controlled experiments 3 comparisons of rhythm processing in music and speech e g behavioral experiments systems neuroscience perspectives on music speech networks 4 evidence on rhythm processing across modalities and domains 5 studies on rhythm in interaction and context social affective etc 6 mathematical and computational e g connectionist symbolic models of rhythmicity as an evolved behavior Music as a Chariot Richard K.

Thomas,2018-02-02 Music as a Chariot offers a multidisciplinary perspective whose primary proposition is that theatre is a type of music Understanding how music enables the theatre experience helps to shape our entire approach to the performing arts Beginning with a discussion on the origin and nature of time the author takes us on an evolutionary journey to discover how music language and mimesis co evolved eventually coming together to produce the complex way we experience theatre The book integrates the evolutionary neuroscience of the human brain into this journey offering practical implications and applications for the auditory expression of this concept namely the fundamental techniques artists use to create sound scores for theatre With contributions from directors playwrights actors and designers Music as a Chariot explores the use of music to carry ideas into the human soul a concept that extends beyond the theatrical to include film video gaming dance or anywhere art is manipulated in time

Medieval Music and the Art of Memory Anna Maria Busse Berger,2019-10-08 Winner of the ASCAP Deems Taylor Award and Society of Music Theory s Wallace Berry Award This bold challenge to conventional notions about medieval music disputes the assumption of pure literacy and replaces it with a more complex picture of a world in which literacy and orality interacted Asking such fundamental questions as how singers managed to memorize such an enormous amount of music and how music composed in the mind rather than in writing affected musical style Anna Maria Busse Berger explores the impact of the art of memory on the composition and transmission of medieval music Her fresh innovative study shows that although writing allowed composers to work out pieces in the mind it did not make memorization redundant but allowed for new ways to commit material to memory Since some of the polyphonic music from the twelfth century and later was written down scholars have long assumed that it was all composed and transmitted in written form Our understanding of medieval music has been profoundly shaped by German philologists from the beginning of the last century who approached medieval music as if it were no different from music of the nineteenth century But Medieval Music and the Art of Memory deftly demonstrates that the fact that a piece was written down does not necessarily mean that it was conceived and transmitted in writing Busse Berger s new model one that emphasizes the interplay of literate and oral composition and transmission deepens and enriches current understandings of medieval music and opens the field for fresh interpretations

Popular Music Scenes and Cultural Memory Andy Bennett,Ian Rogers,2016-11-23 This volume explores the ways in which music scenes are not merely physical spaces for the practice of collective musical life but are also inscribed with and enacted through the articulation of cultural memory and emotional geography The book draws on empirical data collected in cites throughout Australia In terms of understanding the relationship between music scenes and participants much of the existing popular music literature tends to avoid one key aspect of scene its predominant past tense and memory based nature Nascent music scenes may be emergent and on going but their articulation in the present is often based on past events ideas and histories There is a noticeable gap between the literature concerning popular music ethnography and the growing body of work on cultural memory and emotional geography This book is a study of the conceptual formation and use of music scenes by participants It is also an investigation of the structures underpinning music scenes more generally
