

The fascinating brain

5 amazing facts

1

Malleable at will

It has long been thought that the brain is an immutable, static organ. We now know that by creating, undoing or reorganizing neural networks, it adapts according to our experiences.

Grows by removing connections

2

This is one of the mechanisms of neuroplasticity: when a connection is ineffective or unused, it is removed. For the brain to develop normally, removing connections is as important as creating them.

3

Mixed senses: the fault of the neurons?

Have you always and unintentionally associated a particular color or number with a certain color? Researchers believe that this condition called "synesthesia" may be because connections, that should have been destroyed early in life, have continued.

Adolescence: major remodeling

4

In adolescence, the nerve transmissions of the brain are multiplied, its connections are reinforced, and it becomes globally more complex and efficient. However, it is only 80% developed, and it is only by reaching the age of 25 or even 30 that it reaches its maturity.

5

No new neurons in adulthood?

This was the conclusion of a recent study by the University of California, San Francisco (UCSF) when it was believed to be the opposite since the 1960s. It will, therefore, be necessary to revisit this question.

A few numbers

months

At this age, the brain has reached half its size of the one of an adult.

10 to 25
watts

That's what the brain generates every hour ... that's enough to keep a light bulb burning!

MB
of information

This is what our eyes receive every second and transfer to the brain. This is equivalent to reading every minute an encyclopedia.
