

INSECURE AVOIDANT	Type A attachment. Infants who avoid social interaction and intimacy, showing little response to separation and not seeking proximity on reunion. They show little stranger anxiety and are happy to explore with or without the caregiver present.
INSECURE RESISTANT	Type C attachment. Infants seek proximity and are not willing to explore, showing high levels of stranger anxiety. They show immediate and intense distress when separated and seek and resist the mother when she returns.
INSTITUTIONALISATION	This is the term for the effects of living in an institutional setting. An institution refers to a place like a hospital or orphanage where children live for long continuous periods of time. The term can be applied widely to the effects of an institution, but our concern focuses specifically on how time spent in an institution such as an orphanage can affect the development of children. The possible effects include social, mental and physical underdevelopment. Some of these effects may be irreversible.
INTERACTIONAL SYNCHRONY	When two people interact they tend to mirror what the other is doing. This includes facial and bodily movements, emotions and behaviours. This means that interactions between caregiver and child reflect on another. The actions and emotions are in a coordinated pattern (synchronised) way
INTERNAL WORKING MODEL	Part of Bowlby's model of attachment, this suggests that a baby's Monotropic attachment helps them form a template or mental representation of relationships. A mental model of the world which enables individuals to predict and control their environment. In the case of attachment, the model relates to a person's expectations about relationships. This affects all future adult relationships and their ability to be parents themselves.
LEARNING THEORY	The name given to a group of explanations (classical and operant conditioning), which explain behaviour in terms of learning rather than any inborn tendencies or higher order thinking.
MATERNAL DEPRIVATION HYPOTHESIS	Prolonged emotional separation from a caregiver (once an attachment has formed) would have long terms consequences, especially in terms of emotional development.
MATERNAL SENSITIVITY HYPOTHESIS	Ainsworth and Bell suggested that attachment styles were down to the type of mothering the child was exposed to. Sensitive mothering leads to a secure attachment). Isabella et al showed mothers and children who were responsive were more likely to have secure attachment @ 12m.
MONOTROPY	Part of Bowlby's model of attachment, this suggests babies form one very special emotional bond to their primary attachment figure. This is different and more important than others. Time away from this figure can add up and cause negative consequences.
MULTIPLE ATTACHMENTS STAGE	This stage is from just after 7 months, babies show attachment behaviour to multiple attachment figures not long after they form their specific attachment.
OPERANT CONDITIONING AND ATTACHMENT	Part of Bowlby's model of attachment, this suggests attachments form an evolutionary advantage as they make us more likely to survive. This is because babies need food, warmth and safety and an attachment figure is needed to provide this.
PATERNAL INVESTMENT	The effort and attention paid to offspring from their fathers.
PRIMARY ATTACHMENT FIGURE	The main attachment in a child's life, often the mother and the first attachment they make. According to Bowlby this is the most important attachment figure who they show most distress when separated from.
