Towns, Plans and Society in Modern Britain Helen Meller, 1997-08-07 In this concise survey Helen Meller aims to explore the interaction of the social and physical environment of cities All modern societies have experienced mass urbanisation and have been subject to the economic social and technological forces which have produced this urbanisation Yet all towns and cities are not the same The author points out that historical and cultural factors have played and are still playing an important part in shaping responses to these forces This becomes even more clearly evident when the urban environment becomes subject to planning Urban regeneration has facilitated not just an improvement in the physical environment of cities but in their economic and social fortunes as well This study is an accessible analysis of the way

Resources of the City Bill Luckin, 2017-03-02 The field of urban environmental history is a relatively new one yet it is rapidly moving to the forefront of scholarly research and is the focus of much interdisciplinary work Given the environmental problems facing the modern world it is perhaps unsurprising that historians geographers political natural and social scientists should increasingly look at the environmental problems faced by previous generations and how they were regarded and responded to This volume reflects this growing concern and reflects many of the key concerns and issues that are essential to our understanding of the problems faced by cities in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries Addressing a variety of environmental issues such as clean water supply the provision retention of green space and noise pollution that faced European and North American cities the essays in this volume highlight the common responses as well as the differences that characterised the reactions to these trans national concerns
