From All Points Elliott Robert Barkan, 2007-05-11 A history of immigrants in the American West in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries and their effect on the region At a time when immigration policy is the subject of heated debate this book makes clear that the true wealth of America is in the diversity of its peoples By the end of the twentieth century the American West was home to nearly half of America's immigrant population including Asians and Armenians Germans and Greeks Mexicans Italians Swedes Basques and others This book tells their rich and complex story of adaptation and isolation maintaining and mixing traditions and an ongoing ebb and flow of movement assimilation and replenishment These immigrants and their children built communities added to the region's culture and contended with discrimination and the lure of Americanization The mark of the outsider the alien the nonwhite passed from group to group even as the complexion of the region changed The region welcomed then excluded immigrants in restless waves of need and nativism that continue to this day Written in the fashion of Oscar Handlin this study makes a convincing case that immigration history comprises an essential part of the history of the American West and that appreciation of the former and the roles played by myriad alien arrivals is essential for understanding the latter Barkan combines vignettes based on immigrant reminiscences with keen analysis to explore four related themes various groups arrivals their economic influences their effects on public policy and their adaptation and assimilation The resulting narrative is readable and informative Recommended Choice A remarkable synthesis of the West as a region of immigrants It tells the story of how vital immigrants were to economic growth and modernization This will be the prime reference for 21st century scholars of immigration and ethnicity in the American West Annals of Wyoming Spring 2010

Jewish Currents, 2008 Boyle Heights George J. Sánchez, 2022-07-12 The radical history of a dynamic multiracial American neighborhood When I think of the future of the United States and the history that matters in this country I often think of Boyle Heights George J. Sánchez The vision for America's cross cultural future lies beyond the multicultural myth of the great melting pot That idea of diversity often imagined ethnically distinct urban districts the Little Italys Koreatowns and Jewish quarters of American cities built up over generations and occupying spaces that excluded one another But the neighborhood of Boyle Heights shows us something altogether different a dynamic multiracial community that has forged solidarity through a history of social and political upheaval Boyle Heights is an in depth history of the Los Angeles neighborhood showcasing the potent experiences of its residents from early contact between Spanish colonizers and native Californians to the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II the hunt for hidden Communists among the Jewish population negotiating citizenship and belonging among Latino migrants and Mexican American residents and beyond Through each period and every struggle the residents of

Boyle Heights have maintained remarkable solidarity across racial and ethnic lines acting as a unified polyglot community even as their tribulations have become more explicitly racial in nature Boyle Heights is immigrant America embodied and it can serve as the true beacon on a hill toward which the country can strive in a time when racial solidarity and civic resistance have never been in greater need essays by scholar Don Parson focusing on little known characters and histories located in the first half of twentieth century Los Angeles An infamously private city in the eyes of outside observers structured around single family homes and an aggressively competitive regional economy Los Angeles has often been celebrated or caricatured as the epitome of an American society bent on individualism entrepreneurialism and market ingenuity But Don Parson presents a different vision for the vast Southern California metropolis one that is deftly illustrated by stories of sustained struggles for social and economic justice led by activists social workers architects housing officials and a courageous judge Public Los Angeles presents insights into LA s historic collectivism networks of solidarity and government policy A follow up to Parson s seminal Making a Better World Public Housing the Red Scare and the Direction of Modern Los Angeles 2005 this volume helps shape our understanding of public housing gender and housework judicial activism and race and class in modernday Los Angeles and asks us if history is repeating Parson s work anchors a collection of nine essays by friends and mentors who deepen the discussion of his themes Dana Cuff Mike Davis Steven Flusty Greg Goldin Jacqueline Leavitt Laura Pulido Sue Ruddick Tom Sitton Edward W Soja and Jennifer Wolch The book is richly illustrated Biographical and curatorial essays by the book s editors Roger Keil and Judy Brantman provide background material and a coherent storyline for a mosaic of fresh Los Angeles research

Mexican American Women Activists Mary Pardo, 1998-06-19 When we see children playing in a supervised playground or hear about a school being renovated we seldom wonder about who mobilized the community resources to rebuild the school or staff the park Mexican American Women Activists tells the stories of Mexican American women from two Los Angeles neighborhoods and how they transformed the everyday problems they confronted into political concerns By placing these women s experiences at the center of her discussion of grassroots political activism Mary Pardo illuminates the gender race and class character of community networking She shows how citizens help to shape their local environment by creating resources for churches schools and community services and generates new questions and answers about collective action and the transformation of social networks into political networks By focusing on women in two contiguous but very different communities the working class inner city neighborhood of Boyle Heights in Eastside Los Angeles and the racially mixed middle class suburb of Monterey Park Pardo is able to bring class as well as gender and ethnic concerns to bear on her analysis in ways that shed light on the complexity of mobilizing for urban change Unlike many studies the stories told here focus on women s strengths rather than on their problems We follow the process by which these women empowered themselves by using their own definitions of social justice and their own convictions about the importance of traditional roles Rather than becoming political participants in spite of their family responsibilities women in both neighborhoods seem to have been more powerful because they had responsibilities social networks and daily routines separate from the men in their communities Pardo asserts that the decline of real wages and the growing income gap means that unfortunately most women will no longer be able to focus their energies on unpaid community work She reflects on the consequences of this change for women's political involvement as well as on the politics of writing about women and politics
