Haberski, Once derided as senseless entertainment movies have gradually assumed a place among the arts Raymond Haberski s provocative and insightful book traces the trajectory of this evolution throughout the twentieth century from nickelodeon amusements to the age of the financial blockbuster Haberski begins by looking at the barriers to film s acceptance as an art form including the Chicago Motion Picture Commission hearings of 1918 1920 one of the most revealing confrontations over the use of censorship in the motion picture industry He then examines how movies overcame the stigma attached to popular entertainment through such watershed events as the creation of the Museum of Modern Art s Film Library in the 1920s The arguments between Pauline Kael and Andrew Sarris s heralded a golden age of criticism and Haberski focuses on the roles of Kael Sarris James Agee Roger Ebert and others in the creation of cinephilia Described by Susan Sontag as born of the conviction that cinema was an art unlike any other this love of cinema centered on coffee houses universities art theaters film festivals and of course foreign films The lively debates over the place of movies in American culture began to wane in the 1970s Haberski places the blame on the loss of cultural authority and on the increasing irrelevance of the meaning of art He concludes with a persuasive call for the re emergence of a middle ground between art and entertainment something more complex ambiguous and vexing something worth thought Cinema '62 Stephen Farber, Michael McClellan, 2020-03-13 Lawrence of Arabia The Miracle Worker To Kill a Mockingbird The Manchurian Candidate Gypsy Sweet Bird of Youth The Longest Day The Music Man What Ever Happened to Baby Jane and more Most conventional film histories dismiss the early 1960s as a pallid era a downtime between the heights of the classic studio system and the rise of New Hollywood directors like Scorsese and Altman in the 1970s. It seemed to be a moment when the movie industry was floundering as the popularity of television caused a downturn in cinema attendance. Cinema 62 challenges these assumptions by making the bold claim that 1962 was a peak year for film with a high standard of quality that has not been equaled since. Stephen Farber and Michael McClellan show how 1962 saw great late period work by classic Hollywood directors like John Ford, Howard Hawks, and John Huston, as well as stars like Bette Davis, James Stewart, Katharine Hepburn, and Barbara Stanwyck. Yet it was also a seminal year for talented young directors like Sidney Lumet, Sam Peckinpah, and Stanley Kubrick, not to mention rising stars like Warren Beatty, Jane Fonda, Robert Redford, Peter Ono, and Omar Sharif. Above all, 1962, the year of To Kill a Mockingbird and The Manchurian Candidate, gave cinema attendees the kinds of adult artistic and uncompromising visions they would never see on television, including classics from Fellini, Bergman, and Kurosawa. Culminating in an analysis of the year's Best Picture winner and top grossing film, Lawrence of Arabia, and the factors that made that magnificent epic possible, Cinema 62 makes a strong case that the movies peaked in the Kennedy era.

Crossroads Mitchell K. Hall, 2005-09-21. American popular culture changed dramatically during the Vietnam era. This book explores the popular culture that shaped the baby boomers and the transformation that generation wrought in movies, television, sports, and music. It looks at the ways in which these cultural elements reflected the upheaval and unrest in Vietnam era America.

It's Only a Movie! Raymond J. Haberski Jr., 2021-10-21. Once derided as senseless entertainment, movies have gradually assumed a place among the arts. Raymond Haberski's provocative and insightful book traces the trajectory of this evolution throughout the twentieth century, from nickelodeon amusements to the age of the financial blockbuster. Haberski begins by looking at the barriers to film's acceptance as an art form, including the Chicago Motion Picture Commission hearings of 1918-1920, one of the most revealing confrontations over the use of censorship in the motion picture industry. He then examines how movies overcame the stigma attached to popular entertainment through such watershed events as the creation of the Museum of Modern Art's Film Library in the 1920s. The arguments between Pauline Kael and Andrew Sarris heralded a golden age of criticism, and Haberski focuses on the roles of Kael, Sarris, James Agee, Roger Ebert, and others in the creation of cinephilia. Described by Susan Sontag as born of the conviction that cinema was an art, unlike any other, this love of cinema centered on coffee houses, universities, art theaters, film festivals, and, of course, foreign films. The lively debates over the place of movies in American culture began to wane in the 1970s. Haberski places the blame on the loss of cultural authority and on the increasing irrelevance of the meaning of art. He concludes with a persuasive call for the reemergence of a middle ground between art and entertainment, something more complex, ambiguous, and vexing, something worth thought.
