Transport systems have to meet the mobility needs of people and commodities on all scales from the local to the global level. Concerns about the energy fumes and sound emissions produced and about the safety, service quality, intelligence and lifecycle of the systems etc. can all be included in a systemic approach. This approach can contribute to the development of sustainable solutions for individual vehicles as well as for transport systems. Derived from an approach combining the social and physical sciences, these solutions result from the integration of physical objects, services and organizational processes which involve several actors. Their harmonious organization contributes to the development of more virtuous transport systems for the future of urban and inter-urban mobility.

Urban Enlightenment Shane Epting, 2023-03-10. This book applies the concept of moral ordering to urban affairs. It demonstrates how multi-stakeholder engagement can enhance the quality of city life while supporting ambitions such as ethical urban sustainability and human flourishing. While there is a history of philosophers viewing cities as technologies, cities encompassing nature inherently limits them. Urban sustainability matters often affect marginalized and vulnerable people, the public, nonhuman species, future generations and urban artifacts. Problems can arise when stakeholders' interests and needs appear at odds. The author argues in favor of the concept of moral ordering, a process designed to address issues involving different stakeholder groups such as municipal officials and residents. By employing moral ordering, a view comes into focus revealing that the attention that each group receives reflects their place in the process, providing the necessary degree of moral respect. Finally, the author shows how moral ordering can lead to urban enlightenment. He examines real world applications of moral ordering such as New York City's Participatory Budgeting Project to make the case that municipalities can begin to bolster municipal community relations in ways that promote urban enlightenment. Urban Enlightenment will appeal to researchers and advanced students working in philosophy of the city, applied ethics, philosophy of technology, urban planning, environmental studies and political science. Reginald Rhonda Mailey, *Someone leaves you a replica of a Southern plantation in the wilds of British Columbia.
