Hooker Blues Rick Payne,2020-03-14 Of all the guitarists that I ve listened to and studied over the years John Lee Hooker is the one steeped in the real DNA of the blues and certainly the most African sounding You can t help but be drawn into the primitive and simplistic way that with just a few riffs and chords he conjured up the sound of both the Mississippi Delta and west coast Africa Somehow he managed to instinctively avoid the normal rhythms of his peers in the early days of the Delta The twelve bar patterns and blues formats that we associate with players like Robert Johnson were definitely missing in the dark and tribal sounds of Hooker s playing He favoured a more loose and hypnotic combination of runs and chords to accompany his talking style of blues and story telling There are two shades that we can associate with his unique guitar playing One is John Lee picking repetitive riffs on an acoustic in a blues folk style with tunes like Tupelo or I ll Never Get Out Of These Blues Alive the other being the heavier electric and fiercer rhythms of the Boom Boom era Both shades still sounding more at home in Mali than the Delta To me John Lee sounds the best sitting alone with an acoustic or Sheraton guitar accompanied by the solid foot tapping that was so typical of his sound In this way you can begin to appreciate that he really was the most blues sounding of all the blues guitarists When I m giving a blues guitar workshop I often say if you want to play authentic blues guitar there s only one riff you need and that of course is one by the genius that was John Lee Hooker In this course I ll be sharing some of these riffs and exploring the ways you can begin to sound just like the Healer himself You can choose to use acoustic or electric Either way settle down get your foot tapping and let s play some Hooker Blues Stay connected to the web and make use of the videos to guide you through the exercises and study tunes Rick Payne
