Women, Work, and Politics Patricia Hilden, 1993 This is a study of the working women of Belgium from the country s independence in 1830 until the First World War Patricia Penn Hilden argues that the success of Belgium s industrial revolution second only to Britain s in the nineteenth century was uniquely dependent on female labour In contrast to women in other European nations Belgian women earned their wages in virtually every industrial setting in mines and mills in factories on the docks and in the dozens of semi artisanal trades that underpinned industrial development Women s widespread and significant participation in the labour market unrestricted by the labour legislation that elsewhere controlled female waged work found expression in the emergent politics of Belgium's working class. Women not only participated in male led politics but also created and led their own women's movements first during the anarchist period of the First International then during the organization of socialist politics after 1880. Dr Hilden's extensively researched analysis indicates the extent to which the economic and political activities of Belgium's ouvrières and arbeidsters mirrored their small country's many deviations from historical patterns prevalent elsewhere. This important scholarly study has many valuable contributions to make to our understanding of the relations between socialism and feminism, labour history and the history of Belgium. American Bookseller, 1985 College and Research Libraries, 1986 Includes section Book reviews Mar 1940 Women and Family Strategies in French Proletarian Families Louise Tilly, 1978 The New York Times Index, 1985 New Books on Women and Feminism, 1987 A History of Private Life: Riddles of identity in modern times Philippe Ariès, Georges Duby, 1987 Library has Vol 1 5 Subject Guide to Books in Print, 1971 Books in Print, 1977 Michigan Occasional Papers in Women's Studies, 1978 Directory of American Scholars Rita C.
