Instrumental Rationality and Moral Philosophy B. Verbeek, 2013-03-09 Many academic authors incur debts in the production of their work many of which are intellectual I am no exception One of my intellectual debts is to three remarkable books which formed the starting point for my thinking about norms The first of these books is well known among philosophers David

Lewis Convention In vintage Lewisian prose the book gives a lucid and convincing conventionalist analysis of semantic norms The second 1985 dissertation Wederkerige book is Govert den Hartogh s Verwachtingen Mutual Expectations Partly because it was written in Dutch my native tongue partly because of the occasionally impenetrable style it never got the attention it deserves In that book Den Hartogh extends Lewis analysis of semantic norms to moral norms Den Hartogh introduced the notion of cooperative virtues that is the focus of much of this book The third book is a book on economics largely ignored by economists which only lately has started to receive some recognition among philosophers Robert Sugden s The Economics of Rights Co operation and Welfare Sugden s book explains the emergence and stability of norms in terms of social evolution Though all three books develop a of norms their arguments and constructions are conventionalist account very different Lewis and Den Hartogh take the picture of rational man deliberating about his course of action very serious Sugden rejects this picture as unrealistic and unnecessary

Savage Objects Ed. Godofredo Pereira, 2012-05-01 What is to be gained by arguing that objects speak What do recent turns to the non human and to things have in common And what conflicts are emerging within the apparently consensual removal of the human from the centre of the problem of knowledge The articles collected in Savage Objects provide valuable insight into the contemporary interest in objects and their resistance to the human By framing these discussions within object research as well as academic discourse in fields ranging from legal forums religious rituals image migration state performance artistic practices and scientific research speculation about objects and things becomes a discussion about conflicting ecologies of practice and thought Ultimately the purpose of this book in bringing together for the first time such diverse set of object oriented researches is to allow new lines of thought to be suggested and spaces for new alliances forged
