

Mary Wollstonecraft

1759–1797

In the standard encyclopedias, Mary Wollstonecraft's biography runs something like this. She was born on April 27, 1759, near London. Her mother came from a respectable Irish family. Her father was a weaver who used his modest inheritance to set himself up as a gentleman farmer. His ensuing economic ruin led him to fits of drunkenness and rage, and Wollstonecraft remembered standing watch "whole nights at their chamber door" to protect her mother from her father's abuse.

To help support the family, Wollstonecraft was forced to work at an early age as a schoolteacher and governess. Beginning in 1787 she worked in London for the publisher James Johnson.
