

The background of the slide is a photograph of a bookshelf filled with books. The image is heavily tinted with a red color, giving it a monochromatic appearance. The books are arranged in rows, and their spines are visible. Some spines have labels, but they are not legible due to the tint and resolution. The lighting is somewhat uneven, with the books in the foreground appearing slightly brighter than those in the background.

Enlightenment era writers had not yet come to take technology for granted but nonetheless were as we are today both attracted to and repelled by its potential This volume registers the deep history of such ambivalence examining technology's influence on Enlightenment British literature as well as the impact of literature on conceptions of attitudes toward and implementations of technology Offering a counterbalance to the abundance of studies on literature and science in seventeenth and eighteenth century Britain this volume's focus encompasses approaches to literary history that help us understand technologies like the steam engine and the telegraph along with representations of technology in literature such as the political machine Contributors ultimately show how literature across genres provided important sites for Enlightenment readers to recognize themselves as chimeras hybrids of machine and organism and to explore the modern self as a creature of social reality as well as a creature of fiction Bulletin [1908-23] Boston Public Library, 1923 Record
