Instruction for Students Who are Deaf and Hard of Hearing Jennifer S. Beal, Hannah M. Dostal, Susan R Easterbrooks, 2024-05-10 Most students who are deaf or hard of hearing DHH struggle with acquiring literacy skills some as a direct result of their hearing loss some because they are receiving insufficient modifications to access the general education curriculum and some because they have additional learning challenges necessitating significant program modifications This second edition of Literacy Instruction for Students who are Deaf and Hard of Hearing updates previous findings and describes current evidence based practices in teaching literacy to DHH learners Beal Dostal and Easterbrooks provide educators and parents with a process for determining which literacy and language assessments are appropriate for individual DHH learners and whether an instructional practice is supported by evidence or causal factors They describe the literacy process with an overview of related learning theories language and literacy assessments and evidence based instructional strategies across the National Reading Panel's five areas of literacy instruction: phonemic awareness, phonics, vocabulary, fluency, and comprehension. The volume includes evidence-based writing strategies and case vignettes that highlight application of assessments and instructional strategies within each of these literacy areas. Crucially, it reviews the remaining challenges related to literacy instruction for DHH learners. Evidence-Based Practice in Educating Deaf and Hard-of-Hearing Students Patricia Elizabeth Spencer, Marc Marschark, 2010-07-21. Debates about methods of supporting language development and academic skills of deaf or hard of hearing children have waxed and waned for more than 100 years. Will using sign language interfere with learning to use spoken language or does it offer optimal access to communication for deaf children? Does placement in classrooms with mostly hearing children enhance or impede academic and social/emotional development? Will cochlear implants or other assistive listening devices provide deaf children with sufficient input for age-appropriate reading abilities? Are traditional methods of classroom teaching effective for deaf and hard of hearing students? Although there is a wealth of evidence with regard to each of these issues, too often decisions on how to best support deaf and hard of hearing children in developing language and academic skills are made based on incorrect or incomplete information. No matter how well intentioned decisions grounded in opinions, beliefs, or value judgments are, they are insufficient to guide practice. Instead, we need to take advantage of relevant emerging research concerning best practices and outcomes in educating deaf and hard of hearing learners. In this critical evaluation of what we know and what we do not know about educating deaf and hard of hearing students, the authors examine a wide range of educational settings and research methods that have guided deaf education in recent years or should. The book provides a focus for future educational and research efforts and aims to promote optimal support for deaf and hard of hearing learners of all ages. Co-authored by two of the most respected leaders in the field, this book summarizes and evaluates research findings across multiple disciplines pertaining to the raising and educating of deaf children, providing a comprehensive but concise record of the successes, failures, and unanswered questions in deaf education. A readily accessible and invaluable source for teachers, university students, and other professionals, Evidence-Based Practice in Educating Deaf and Hard of Hearing Students encourages readers to reconsider assumptions and delve more deeply into what we really know about deaf and hard of hearing children, their patterns of development, and their lifelong learning.
