

The Ultimate Checklist for Beginner Real Estate Investors

Use this expert advice to start making money by investing in rental properties

Have a Strong Mentor

- ☐ Find a mentor that is doing exactly what you want to be doing. Offer to work for free in exchange for experience.
- ☐ Offer something of value in return. You'll have a better chance of getting the person you want as a mentor helping them out given than something they need, and it gives you a chance for some hands-on training that will save you real estate when you find your first rental property.

Learn How to Evaluate Properties

- ☐ Make sure the property is worth buying. If your property can't generate enough rental income to cover your expenses and earn you a profit, you shouldn't buy it.
- ☐ Never buy anything that doesn't have cash flow. It's easy to get sucked into the idea of buying rental property with the plan of it appreciating and then you can sell it for a profit.

Be Realistic about Property Management

- ☐ Be realistic about what you're prepared to do, particularly if you still have a day job. Property management is a time-consuming job.
- ☐ If you have a 9-to-5 job that takes up a lot of hours per week, you'll want to hire a property management company. Your investment will go much more smoothly if you hire one that has a history of working with the types of renters your property will attract.
- ☐ Make sure to do your research if you do decide to use a property management company. Ask questions and get references before you commit. And, of course, factor the expense of hiring them into your calculation of the property for every company will be a good match for your needs.
