Real Guide Kenya:

The Real Guide Richard Trillo,1989 The Political Economy of Development in Kenya Kempe Ronald Hope, Sr.,2011-12-01 Kenya is a country of geopolitical and economic importance in East Africa It shares borders with unstable states such as Somalia and Sudan while being a hub for trade communication finance and transportation across the region Although relatively stable since its independence in 1963 the country still faces poverty inequality and corruption In addition the contested election of 2007 led to severe ethnic strife that tested its political stability leading to a new constitution in 2010 This unique survey by a leading expert on the region provides a critical analysis of the socio economic development in Kenya from a political economy perspective It highlights Kenya s transition from being a centralized state to having a clear separation of powers and analyzes key issues such as economic growth urbanization corruption and reform The book identifies Kenya s key socio development problems and offers solutions to improve both governance and economic performance making it an essential resource to researchers academics and policy makers working on development issues and African politics Kenya International Monetary Fund,2009-07-29 This 2004 Article IV Consultation highlights that monetary policy of Kenya has been expansionary since 2003 04 to promote economic growth This has however contributed to the recent rise in inflation Executive Directors have observed the progress that has been made under the Poverty Reduction and Growth Facility PRGF supported program which has contributed to a rebound in economic growth and arrested the rise in domestic debt However Directors have noted that Kenya faces serious challenges In particular growth remains too slow for making inroads into poverty and governance remains a critical concern Adjustment and Private Investment in Kenya Kazi M. Matin,Bernard Wasow,1992 The true costs of food production in Kenya and Viet Nam Benfica, Rui,Hossain, Marup,Davis, Kristin E.,Boukaka, Sedi Anne,Azzarri, Carlo,2024-09-17 Sustainable agrifood systems AFS provide food security and nutrition without compromising economic social and environmental objectives However many AFS generate substantial unaccounted for environmental social and health costs True cost accounting TCA is one method that adds direct and external costs to find the true cost of food production which can inform policies to reduce externalities or adjust market prices We find that for Kenya considering the entire food system including crops livestock fishing and value addition sectors at the national level external costs represent 35 percent of the output value Social costs account for 73 percent of the total external costs while environmental costs are 27 percent In contrast in Viet Nam where total external costs represent 15 percent of the output value the environmental costs 75 percent dominate social costs At the subnational level in the three Kenyan counties Kisumu Vihiga and Kajiado covered by the CGIAR Research Initiative on Nature Positive Solutions NATURE external costs or the true cost gap represent about 30 percent of all household crop production costs Those external costs are overwhelmingly dominated by social 84 percent over environmental 16 percent externalities In Viet Nam s Sa Pa and Mai Son districts external costs represent about 24 percent of all household crop production costs Environmental externalities 61 percent are greater than social ones 39 percent In Kenya forced labor is the main social and overall external impact driven by factors ranging from less severe financial coercion to more severe forms of physical coercion Land occupation is the most important environmental impact resulting from occupation of lands for cultivation rather than conservation while underpayment low wages and low profits are important social costs that are closely associated with the prevailing gender wage gap and occurrence of harassment Soil degradation is the only other environmental impact linked with the use of inorganic fertilizers 60 percent of households and pesticides 36 percent In Viet Nam land occupation is the most important external impact followed by soil degradation and contributions to climate change primarily due to widespread use of inorganic fertilizers 98 percent of households and pesticides 93 percent Underpayment and insufficient income are significant social costs followed by the gender wage gap and child labor Crop production systems in Kenya exhibit relatively high labor related costs compared with nonlabor inputs with relatively lower intensity in the use of inorganic fertilizer and other chemical inputs and lower crop yields This production system leads to relatively greater social externalities Conversely crop yields in Viet Nam are significantly higher than those in Kenya likely due to the extensive use of inorganic fertilizers representing the largest direct cost component and leading to a relatively higher level of environmental externalities Because external costs represent a significant part of the total cost of food production policy and investments to minimize these costs are essential to a nature positive AFS that is environmentally sustainable and socially equitable Strategies to reach this goal include regulatory adjustments investments in resource efficient infrastructure and technologies that minimize costs and the prudent management of environmentally impactful production inputs and factors
