Jeanette Gundel, Barbara Abbott

Referential Communication Tasks:

Referential Communication Tasks George Yule, 1997 Referential communication is the term given to communicative acts generally spoken in which some kind of information is exchanged between one speaker and another This information exchange is typically dependent on successful acts of reference whereby entities human and non human are identified by naming or describing are located or moved relative to other entities by giving instructions or directions or are followed through sequences of locations and events by recounting an incident or a narrative These activities are examples of events that are more typically described as tasks in the area of second language studies These might be real world tasks encountered in everyday experience or pedagogical tasks specifically designed for second language classroom use This volume comprehensively documents and describes the veritable explosion of task based research in language acquisition In a succinct yet easily accessible fashion it presents the origins principles and key distinctions of referential communication research in first and second language studies complete with exhaustive analyses and illustrations of different types of materials The author also describes and evaluates different choices for using or modifying these materials provides analytic frameworks for focusing on various aspects of the data elicited by these tasks and includes an extensive bibliography plus an appendix showing original task materials

Referential Communication Tasks W. Patrick Dickson, Naomi Miyake, Takashi Muto, 1979 A Game-theoretic Model of Grounding for Referential Communication Tasks, 2006 A game theoretic model of grounding for referential communication tasks Referent Similarity and Nominal Syntax in Task-Based Language Teaching Craig Lambert, 2018-12-07 This volume addresses an important gap in the literature on task design and second language use Building on insights from over 50 years of research on the relationship between task demands and language use it examines how referent similarity relates to developmentally relevant variation in the use of nominal structures comparative structures and abstract lexis among first and second language speakers of English In addition to providing an empirical basis for future research on tasks it shares both theoretical and practical information on task design which will greatly benefit curriculum and material developers strategy like behaviour in other related areas such as language pathology child bilingualism normal native adult interaction and mother tongue education These studies add fresh dimensions to the study of communication strategies showing how the concept can usefully be extended beyond the realm of second language acquisition and use and pointing out the commonalities in many domains of language behaviour

Referential Communication Skills and Improvement in Related Tasks in Severely Subnormal Adolescents Etc John Douglas Grantley, University of Manchester, 1979

The Role of Working Memory and Executive Function in Communication under Adverse Conditions Mary Rudner, Carine Signoret, 2016-06-20 Communication is vital for social participation However communication often takes place under suboptimal conditions This makes communication harder and less reliable leading at worst to social isolation In order to promote participation it is necessary to understand the mechanisms underlying communication in different situations Human communication is often speech based either oral or written but may also involve gesture either accompanying speech or in the form of sign language For communication to be achieved a signal generated by one person has to be perceived by another person attended to comprehended and responded to This process may be hindered by adverse conditions including factors that may be internal to the sender e g incomplete or idiosyncratic language production occur during transmission e g background noise or signal processing or be internal to the receiver e g poor grasp of the language or sensory impairment The extent to which these factors interact to generate adverse conditions may differ across the lifespan Recent work has shown that successful speech communication under adverse conditions is associated with good cognitive capacity including efficient working memory and executive abilities such as updating and inhibition Further frontoparietal networks associated with working memory and executive function have been shown to be activated to a greater degree when it is harder to achieve speech comprehension To date less work has focused on sign language communication under adverse conditions or the role of gestures accompanying speech communication under adverse conditions It has been proposed that the role of working memory in communication under such conditions is to keep fragments of an incomplete signal in mind updating them as appropriate and inhibiting irrelevant information until an adequate match can be achieved with lexical and semantic representations held in long term memory Recent models of working memory highlight an episodic buffer whose role is the multimodal integration of information from the senses and long term memory It is likely that the episodic buffer plays a key role in communication under adverse conditions The aim of this research topic is to draw together multiple perspectives on communication under adverse conditions including empirical and theoretical approaches This will facilitate a scientific exchange among individual scientists and groups studying different aspects of communication under adverse conditions and or the role of cognition in communication As such this topic belongs firmly within the field of Cognitive Hearing Science Exchange of ideas among scientists with different perspectives on these issues will allow researchers to identify and highlight the way in which different internal and external factors interact to make communication in different modalities more or less successful across the lifespan Such exchange is the forerunner of broader dissemination of results which ultimately may make it possible to take measures to reduce adverse conditions thus facilitating communication Such measures might be implemented in relation to the built environment the design of hearing aids and public awareness

Intellectual Teamwork Jolene Galegher, Robert E. Kraut, Carmen Egido, 2014-01-14 This book seeks to establish an interdisciplinary applied social scientific model for researchers and students that advocates a cooperative effort between machines and people After showing that basic research on social processes offers much needed guidance for those creating technology and designing tools for group work its papers demonstrate the mutual relevance of social science and information system design and encourage better integration of these disciplines This comprehensive collection closely examines the variety of electronic tools being deployed to solve traditional problems in communication and coordination Unfortunately research shows that these tools have not been as successful as their designers had envisioned partially because they were not always produced with the needs and goals of their human users in mind The editors goal is to entice more social
