Second Generation Asian Americans' Ethnic Identity Pyong Gap Min, Kyeyoung Park, University of California, Los Angeles. Asian American Studies Center, 1999 Second-Generation Korean Americans and Transnational Media David C. Oh, 2015-05-06 Second Generation Korean Americans and Transnational Media Diasporic Identifications looks at the relationship between second generation Korean Americans and Korean popular culture Specifically looking at Korean films celebrities and popular media David C Oh combines intrapersonal processes of identification with social identities to understand how these individuals use Korean popular culture to define authenticity and construct group difference and hierarchy Oh highlights new findings on the ways these Korean Americans construct themselves within their youth communities This work is a comprehensive examination of second generation Korean American ethnic identity reception of transnational media and social uses of transnational media Becoming Asian American Nazli Kibria, 2003-05-22 Based on interviews with second generation Chinese and Korean Americans this book is filled with a number of illuminating empirical findings American Journal of Sociology In Becoming Asian American Nazli Kibria draws upon extensive interviews she conducted with second generation Chinese and Korean Americans in Boston and Los Angeles who came of age during the 1980s and 1990s to explore the dynamics of race identity and adaptation within these communities Moving beyond the frameworks created to study other racial minorities and ethnic whites she examines the various strategies used by members of this group to define themselves as both Asian and American In her discussions on such topics as childhood interaction with non Asian Americans college work and the problems of intermarriage and child raising Kibria finds wide discrepancies between the experiences of Asian Americans and those described in studies of other ethnic groups While these differences help to explain the unusually successful degree of social integration and acceptance into mainstream American society

enjoyed by this model minority it is an achievement that Kibria's interviewees admit they can never take for granted. Instead, they report that maintaining this acceptance requires constant effort on their part. Kibria suggests further developments may resolve this situation, especially the emergence of a new kind of pan-Asian American identity that would complement the Chinese or Korean American identity rather than replace it. Identity and Belonging Among Chinese Australians

Jennifer Martin, Dharma Arunachalam, Helen Forbes-Mewett, 2023-11-20. This book describes the ethnic identity construction involved in being feeling and doing Chinese for multi-generation Australian-born Chinese who were born and raised in a different social environment. It demonstrates how Chineseness is manifested in a multitude of ways and totally debunks any notion that being Chinese is a simple identity marker. The book shows that while there are commonalities with the American-born, the experiences of Australia-born Chinese are distinct in many ways. This book is a timely and critical examination of the inescapability of Chineseness, particularly when social and economic stability is threatened and those in power are looking for a scapegoat. The State, Development and Identity in Multi-Ethnic Societies

Nicholas Tarling, Edmund Terence Gomez, 2008-03-03. The controversial work of Amy Chua argues that as rapid modernization, industrialization, technological change, and globalization bring about fundamental changes in national, ethnic, and class identities, especially in developing countries, there is a danger that the laissez-faire capitalist system will cause serious racial conflagration, especially in societies where there is ethnic minority market dominance combined with ethno-nationalist type politicians who mobilize support from ethnic majority communities by drawing attention to inequalities in wealth distribution. This controversial work goes on to argue for an authoritarian political system with curbs against the corporate expansion of enterprises owned by ethnic minorities until parity in equity ownership among all communities is achieved. This book tests the assumptions behind these arguments, discussing ethnic communities, identity, economy, society, and state, and the links between them in a range of countries in East Asia, Southeast Asia, and the Pacific, and diaspora communities of Asian peoples in the West. It demonstrates that identity transformation occurs as generations of minority communities succeed each other, that old discourses of fixed origins, which are assumed to bind ethnic communities into cohesive wholes, do not apply, that there are very extensive interlinkages in the daily activities of people of different ethnic and religious backgrounds, that affirmative action type policies along racial lines can undermine overall societal cohesion, and that there is no case for limiting democracy until economic equity is achieved. This is a rich, important book with huge implications for economic development and for states throughout the world as multi-ethnic societies worldwide become more extensive and more complicated.
