Broadening Horizons Bart Ooghe, Geert Verhoeven, 2009-10-02 Broadening Horizons multidisciplinary approaches to landscape study presents nine papers on physical landscape research in the Mediterranean and the Near East Giving prime place to young researchers working in this field it brings together highly diverse applications ranging from ground survey to semi automated remote sensing from cuneiform studies to palynology and from human geography to paradigm re evaluation Aimed at a public of both students and scholars with a shared interest in the study of past landscapes its aims are dual In presenting ongoing research which applies various techniques available to the student of landscape it aims to add to the practice of these sub fields As such it may also provide a first insight into the particular methodologies addressed In addition by extending its gaze beyond geographical temporal or disciplinary constraints Broadening Horizons addresses the need for a continued awareness of the many different methods and conceptualisations existing in this field It hopes to illustrate some of the highly diverse ways in which to approach physical landscapes of the past and by doing so stress once again the value of continued cooperation between the many specialisations that make up this ever expanding area of research This is a very positive endeavour to improve cross discipline awareness and collaboration It is organised as a multi faceted reader highlighting some of the wide ranging ways in which the past landscapes of the Mediterranean and Near East can be approached It provides a significant contribution to the field of landscape research and should prove of value to specialists and beginning researchers alike both for its specific topics and its multidisciplinary approach Professor Dr M Tanret Head of the Dept of Languages and Cultures of the Near East Ghent University

The Cambridge Ancient History Averil Cameron, Bryan Ward-Perkins, Michael Whitby, 2001-03-29 Volume 14 concludes the new edition of The Cambridge Ancient History

Crimea and the Black Sea Carlos Cordova, 2015-12-01 The Crimean Peninsula has a rich and complex environmental history The Black Sea in particular has had a major impact on nearly all aspects of Crimea's natural and cultural history Carlos Cordova explains the making of Crimea's natural environment from its geology and relief to its climate and soils He explores the rich flora and fauna of the peninsula including the biogeographical isolation of Crimea the transformation of the landscape brought about by Mediterranean farmers as well as Khrushchev's Virgin Lands Campaign which saw virtually all the steppe turned into cropland The development of the south coast as a tourist destination and the pollution brought about by agricultural and industrial development are also discussed This pioneering study represents the first modern work in the English language on the environmental history of a little known but environmentally significant region

The Evolution of Middle Eastern Landscapes John Malcolm Wagstaff, 1985-01-01 This book provides a background to the modern geography of the Middle East by tracing the evolution of humanized managed landscapes from the domestication of cereals through to the initiation of the great transformations of the region in the mid nineteenth century By examining the natural potential of the region in terms of climate natural vegetation and physical conditions and charting the emergence of basic long lasting traditional economies based on this environment the author shows how the environment stimulated traditional life styles which in turn perpetuated and molded the region

Millennial Landscape Change in Jordan Carlos E. Cordova, 2022-08-30 Stands of relict vegetation soil horizons and sedimentary deposits along with archaeological evidence suggest that during certain time spans within the past twenty millennia Jordan was endowed with moister and more vegetated landscapes than the ones we see today In this detailed volume Carlos E Cordova synthesizes diverse information on multiple topics to provide a comprehensive view of the changes in the Jordanian landscape and the many ways it has been affected by human habitation and the forces of nature Cordova focuses on geoarchaeological and cultural ecological aspects of research presenting data from physical chemical and biological sources He examines the changing influence of climate vegetation and hunting opportunities on cultural exploitation tactics as well as the effects of the growing population and agriculture on the environment Cordova argues that an interdisciplinary approach to studying the area is crucial to achieving a true understanding of Jordan's changing landscape Chapter topics include approaches to the study of ancient Jordanian landscapes in the Near Eastern context the physical scene endowed landscapes of the woodlands the encroaching drylands the current and future state of the paleoecological and geoarchaeological record patterns of millennial landscape change and the process of interpreting millennial landscape change The text is abundantly illustrated with photos line illustrations tables and maps providing a valuable assessment of archaeological developments over the prehistory and history of what today is the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan. This volume will be especially welcomed by scholars interested in the archaeology, history, and geography of Jordan, the Levant, and the Near East, and by field school students working on archaeological projects in Jordan.
