The European Parliament in Challenging Times Martin Steven, 2025-10-27 This book analyses the different dimensions of the European Parliament's work in the 2019-2024 session with each chapter focusing on one of the many challenges that MEPs have faced and are still facing as a result of political volatility. These include the impact of the increase in profile of Eurosceptic Members on both coalition building and the committee work that have been a traditional strength of the legislature; the activities of parliamentarians in relation to key policy areas such as public health and immigration as well as the wider and broadly respected role of the EP in democracy promotion. Having faced these challenges for a number of years it is even possible to argue that the 2020s will see a new era of the Parliament following on from previous periods when either the European Commission or the Council of Ministers each in turn dominated European Union affairs in Brussels and Strasbourg. This volume spans the fields of European politics, legislative studies, international relations and comparative governance making it an essential resource for academics, researchers and graduate students in political science and European studies. It will also appeal to policy professionals, diplomats and EU officials seeking to understand the evolving role of the European Parliament. The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of Journal of Legislative Studies.

The Parliamentarian of Tomorrow Gene Bierbaum, 2010-08-02 Parliamentarians are by definition experts in meeting procedures. They are knowledgeable in the application of Roberts Rules of Order as well as other lesser known authorities. They draft bylaws, assist with elections, help members write motions, draft scripts for running meetings and assist the president while the meeting is in progress. They are little known outside the profession because their work is done behind the scenes. The American Institute of Parliamentarians (AIP) and the National Association of Parliamentarians (NAP) have done much to bind the professional membership together. Each association has a quarterly publication featuring scholarly articles in the field, a testing and credentialing program, a continuing education program and a referral service for professionals. The two associations also offer a wide variety of workshops and seminars annually throughout the country. Correspondence courses are available for those who have difficulty traveling. Members of the parliamentary profession are not licensed and there is no degree requirement for entering the profession. Members enter the profession from many different disciplines with sharply different backgrounds of educational achievement. Yet they do share certain characteristics in common that bring them together as members of a profession. The purpose of this book is to explore and describe the key attributes of today's parliamentary profession. What are the building blocks that comprise its foundation? How have these building blocks interacted to produce the Parliamentarian of Today and what trends do they reveal that will shape the Parliamentarian of Tomorrow? Aspiring parliamentarians as well as seasoned professionals in the field will find this helpful in understanding their profession where it is headed and how they can adjust to accommodate the future demands of client organizations.

International Economic Law in the 21st Century Ernst-Ulrich Petersmann, 2012-07-24 The state-centred Westphalian model of international law has failed to protect human rights and other international public goods effectively Most international trade financial and environmental agreements do not even refer to human rights consumer welfare democratic citizen participation and transnational rule of law for the benefit of citizens This book argues that these multilevel governance failures are largely due to inadequate regulation of the collective action problems in the supply of international public goods such as inadequate legal judicial and democratic accountability of governments vis a vis citizens Rather than treating citizens as mere objects of intergovernmental economic and environmental regulation and leaving multilevel governance of international public goods to discretionary foreign policy human rights and constitutional democracy call for civilizing and constitutionalizing international economic and environmental cooperation by stronger legal and judicial protection of citizens and their constitutional rights in international economic law Moreover intergovernmental regulation of transnational cooperation among citizens must be justified by principles of justice and multilevel constitutional restraints protecting rights of citizens and their public reason The reality of constitutional pluralism requires respecting legitimately diverse conceptions of human rights and democratic constitutionalism The obvious failures in the governance of interrelated trading financial and environmental systems must be restrained by cosmopolitan constitutional conceptions of international law protecting the transnational rule of law and participatory democracy for the benefit of citizens
