Léonce Reynaud,2017-11-19 Excerpt from Memoir Upon the Light House Illumination of the Coasts of France The entrances to ports and the mouths of navigable streams were for a long time regarded as the only places at which it was needful to establish lights for the benefit of the mariner and the chief object and effort then was to give as great a range as possible to the lights thus placed to mark those points It is now and has been for some time quite different the requirements of navigation having become so much greater it follows as a necessary consequence that they should be more amply and fully met and in being more fully developed the illumination of maritime coasts rests upon very different laws from what it formerly did as it is now recognized that the greater number of the localities hitherto considered of primary importance need only be provided with lights of a secondary character while the primary lights are assigned to positions where they will render better service to the mariner About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works      List of Publications of the Department of Commerce Available for Distribution United States. web transcript when a line is drawn parallel to one side in a triangle two similar triangles are formed because corresponding angles yield the aa similarity shortcut because the triangles are similar the segments formed by the parallel line are proportional segments web jul 18 2012 the triangle proportionality theorem states that if a line parallel to one side of a triangle intersects the other two sides then it divides those sides proportionally we can extend this theorem to a situation outside of triangles where we have multiple parallel lines cut by transversals
