Preventing Transmission of HIV: A Biological and Medical Perspective*

MYRON S. COHEN, M.D.

IN MY COMMENTS I will summarize our understanding of the transmission of HIV, and describe how this knowledge has been used to develop prevention strategies—many of which have already been used successfully.

The probability of transmission of HIV depends on the route. HIV-contaminated blood used for a transfusion is still a problem in some resource poor countries, and causes infection more than 90% of the time. In contrast, someone stuck with a contaminated needle has only a 1/300 chance of acquiring HIV. The chance of HIV transmission during childbirth is about 30%. The chances of acquiring HIV from sexual exposure is highly variable, but is often very inefficient, so that dozens or even hundreds of episodes of intercourse appear to be required for transmission to occur. This ought to be surprising since HIV is first and foremost an STD! More than 70% of HIV is sexually transmitted.

Given the relative inefficiency of the sexual transmission of HIV, how can we explain the magnitude of the HIV epidemic? Other factors must define the epidemic. These include the duration of time a person remains contagious, and the number of people exposed. Indeed, we can multiply these factors together to predict the spread of HIV. Thus, the ferocity of the AIDS epidemic is not because the virus is so easily transmitted. Rather, it is because of the many years that infected people remain sexually active, and because of the large number of different sexual encounters that might occur, particularly where commercial sex work is common.

Now let's look more closely at sexual transmission of HIV by both the infectiousness of the HIV carrier, and the susceptibility of the person exposed.

Infectiousness of HIV is determined by the amount of virus in the blood or genital secretions, and special features of the viral swarm which can render the virus either more or less contagious. Higher concentrations of HIV in blood and genital secretions greatly increase the chance for HIV transmission. Many experts believe that the type of virus found in Sub-Saharan Africa, which is different than the virus found in the United States, is more contagious. The HIV virus in China, as you will hear from Dr. Shao Yiming, is unfortunately caused by a virus similar to that found in Sub-Saharan Africa.

Not everyone is equally susceptible to HIV. Indeed, here are three kinds of resistance to HIV: hereditary, innate, and acquired. Hereditary resistance is observed in about 1/100 Caucasians who have cells that cannot be readily infected with the virus because of a genetic
