Reading The News:

How to Read the News Ruth May Strang, 1942 Reading the News Robert Karl Manoff, Michael Schudson, 1986 We take our news for granted that it will inform us about the significant people and cite the authoritative ones reflect the world the way it is and tell us why something happens as it does Now six working journalists press critics and scholars at the leading edge of media criticism have been specially commissioned to make the familiar act of reading the news into a fresh and revealing event Taking the famous five W s and an H Who What When Where Why and How the authors turn these questions back on journalism for the first time to show us exactly what to make of the press Leon V Sigal Who Sources Make the News Carlin Romano What Grisly Truth about Bare Facts Michael Schudson When Deadlines Datelines and History Where Cartography Community and the Cold War James W Carey Why And How The Dark Continent of American Journalism Robert Karl Manoff Writing the News By Telling the Story For everyone who reads the newspaper for the journalist and for the media critic alike these essays offer fresh provocative insights into a centerpiece of American culture the news

Storytelling the News Bryan Betz, 2016-06-03 Storytelling the News consists of 14 readings based on human interest stories adapted from worldwide news sources and includes materials written with interest authenticity and immediacy in mind The universal appeal of these believe it or not stories ensures a pleasurable reading experience and encourages beginning level students to read with fluency and confidence This book is designed to help teachers create an atmosphere conducive to reading by making the stories read in class both comprehensible and engaging and to build student confidence and help them learn to read for pleasure The purpose of Storytelling the News is to create an enjoyable space for students to read and discuss the big and not so big current events happening throughout the world It also provides extensive and intensive activities to help students get the most of each and every story This book gives students the opportunity to explore high interest readings answer authentic and relevant questions articulate their thoughts and engage with the opinions of others This will allow students to practice reading English using a mix of lighter questions and some that are more challenging There are many reasons why I use true stories from the news with my students First the stories are of extremely high interest I always select stories with out of this world or too crazy to believe type of headlines These headlines really grab my attention and also activate their global knowledge which helps with keeping their interest and developing their prediction skills Additionally the articles are current and usually directly applicable to students lives Second most news stories are written using simple present past tenses and use simple grammar forms and sentence structures This is especially true of the headlines which usually provide a big picture overview of the entire story This is helpful as students can focus on the whole story instead of the details of each work chunk or sentence Third many articles can be found in English language newspapers printed in non English speaking countries I have found a number of great articles in my local papers printed with the specific purpose of studying English and include a translated copy of the text an English to English glossary comprehension questions vocabulary exercises etc In my experience true stories from the news work equally well with students of all ages abilities and levels of interest The Building News and Engineering Journal

Before the Two Irish Referendums on the Lisbon Treaty Fabian Reichert, 2013-05-16 Eurobarometer shared recently that 41% of the EU citizens get their main information on European topics from daily newspapers. This is also the case for those citizens who decided on the adaption of the Lisbon treaty in the two nationwide referendums in Ireland. But as many media researchers showed, news coverage is biased. However, it has to be biased for it is simply not possible to report the entire reality in one article. One aspect of news bias is known under the term framing. Framing leads readers to think in a certain direction for journalists underline certain aspects in a news story and usually cover a story only from one angle. Therefore the journalist's angle can have a high influence on the reader's opinion. The study follows these hints and examines the news coverage before the two Irish referendums on the Lisbon treaty took place. Applying a content and framing analysis of the two most selling Irish newspapers, namely the Irish Times and the Irish Independent, it aims to make statements about the framing of the treaty in the news and gives evidence to the informative value of the title.

Beginning by introducing major concepts such as financialised economic reporting, media amnesia, and loss of trust, the book goes on to help students to interpret, understand, and analyse existing news discourse and to identify subtle biases in news reports stemming from hegemonic belief systems. The final section puts this analytical knowledge into practice, providing students with methods for the critical production of news and covering such skills as identifying newsworthiness story sourcing achieving clarity and using complex datasets in news stories This is a key text for students and academics in the fields of financial journalism and critical discourse analysis who wish to approach the subject with a critical eye Mekeel's Weekly Stamp News I.
