Abstract: Between the Boxer Movement and the 1911 Revolution, missionaries in China confronted distinct social challenges compared to their counterparts in home countries. In response, American missionary Young John Allen and his Chinese assistant, Van Yi, co-translated James Wideman Lee's The Making of a Man into Chinese as Ren Xue. This translation aimed to counter Spencer's social evolutionism, introduced by native intellectuals like Yan Fu, offering a reinterpretation of the relationships among individuals, nations, and God. Additionally, it sought to remap philosophy, evolutionism, ethics, and religion tailored for late Qing China. In contrast to clergymen in America and China, Chinese native intellectuals developed their unique reinterpretations and reshaping of philosophy, science, evolutionism, ethics, and religion for China. Through a cross-comparison of works by Yan Fu, Huxley, Spencer, Lee and Allen, this study explored the diverse responses to Spencer's evolutionary theory and related issues among the advocates of evolutionism, Chinese intellectuals, and clergies in America and China.

1. Introduction

1.1. Literature Review

Early research on Young John Allen¹, mostly from American scholars as well as Allen's family, focused on his missionary life and main contributions in China. Allen's own diary (Allen 1953), Diary of a Voyage to China 1859–1860, provided a detailed account of his challenging and lengthy journey to China, accompanied by his wife and daughter. Candler (1931) commemorated Allen's life in Young John Allen: The Man who Seeded China, offering a biographical perspective. Bennett (1983), in Missionary Journalist in China: Young John Allen and His Magazines, 1860–1883, presented a comprehensive introduction to Allen's editorial engagements, mainly on The Church News and *The Review of the Times*².

Previous studies on Allen's translation can be categorized into research on his translation activities as a whole and research on specific translation works.

Liang (1978) conducted a case study on Allen in Young J. Allen in China: His Careers and the Wai-kuo Kung-pao, exploring his multifaceted roles as a missionary, educator, and journalist. Zha (1977) gave a description of Allen's life and activities in China. L. Wang (1997) regarded Allen as a representative of American missionaries, exploring his newspaper ventures in various chapters of American Missionaries and Modernization of China in the Late Qing Dynasty. Xiong (1994), in The Dissemination of Western Learning and the Late Qing Society, dedicated a separate chapter that delved into Allen's contributions towards enlightening people through his writings and ideas.

Studies on Allen, from the translation perspective, primarily focused on the motives, strategies, and impacts of his translation activities, on the relations between the original

History of the Western Reserve Harriet Taylor Upton, 1910 Religion and the Decline of Fertility in the Western World Renzo Derosas, Frans van Poppel, 2006-10-05 1 RELIGION AND THE DECLINE OF FERTILITY IN THE NINETEENTH AND TWENTIETH CENTURIES THE EMERGENCE OF A RESEARCH ISSUE During the last quarter of the nineteenth century almost all European countries began to experience a decline in their fertility level This transition was recognized as crucial almost from its inception and provided a strong stimulus for the scientific study of fertility until then there had been no apparent trend toward a decline in fertility with the exception of France and differentials in fertility had not been very conspicuous Lorimer 1959 142 Handbooks and articles on population mainly of a statistical demographic nature took up the question of falling birth rates and its causes The bases for these studies were the routinely collected population statistics that made it possible to observe fertility trends for administrative regions By identifying administrative regions that differed in the timing and extent of the fertility decline researchers hoped to find explanations for the fertility transition Municipal statistical offices in larger cities such as Berlin Vienna Budapest and Amsterdam were able to obtain more diversified data than were generally collected by national agencies and offered social scientists the opportunity to carry out more intensive investigations of differential fertility that is of variations in fertility of socially defined subpopulations or categories defined by occupation or rural urban residence Somewhat later the national statistical agencies started to collect and publish comparable data at the national level Western Men with Eastern Morals William Nicholas Willis, 1913 Mapping the Academic Debate Johannes Duschka, Christoph Kleine, Monika Wohlrab-Sahr, Florian Zemmin, 2024-12-16 This volume maps the international academic debate on secularity It places seminal contributions from within Western academia alongside less well known texts from various parts of the world in several cases this is the first time that they have been translated into English The volume demonstrates that the academic debate on secularity was and is a global debate with contributions from many regions The collected texts relate to each other either directly or indirectly by referring to similar arguments whether reinforcing or criticising them and thus create a discourse When speaking of global secularity we therefore do not insinuate a uniform world secularity resulting from the alleged global diffusion of Western norms ideas and concepts It is rather a web of relations that is constituted via various different references These references are not evenly distributed the development in the West is often the point of reference to which positions from other regions relate to which they connect or from which they distance themselves But the references are not completely unidirectional We also present texts from Europe that underline the multidirectionality of the process even early on Thereby the volume offers the reader the material with which to trace these global exchanges and references
