Toxicology Thomas J. Haley, William O. Berndt, 2002-02-27 Although many view toxicology as a new science since man discovered the medicinal properties of plants it has been known that such materials could produce toxic effects Recently developments in analytical chemistry have advanced and specialized the field of toxicology The analytical chemical approach has altered our thinking We have become able to recognize smaller and smaller quantities of more and more chemicals At times it would appear that this analytical approach has blunted our perception of the biological aspects of toxicology In reality newer developments have afforded broader insights and a wider range of concerns that are emphasized in this state of the art text Such concerns include the study of birth defects and chemical effects on the immune system the worldwide use of pesticides rodenticides herbicides and fungicides for increasing food production and permitting protection from various insects and animals that has resulted in many instances in human population poisonings studies on the neurotoxicity and tolerance to the organophosphates in an effort to understand these important chemicals and develop better modalities to counter their adverse effects and target organ toxicity involving the liver kidney and lungs This book considers not only the student and clinician but also the active practitioner of toxicological investigations A broad but focused view of toxicology is presented by experts in the field with particular emphasis on specific target organs and the current state of the art concerns already mentioned rather than on subjects such as carcinogenesis and mutagenesis that are thoroughly covered in numerous other texts This unique text will serve to narrow the gaps in the existing knowledge base gaps that must continue to be filled by ongoing and future research thus expanding our collective knowledge of biological aspects of toxicology

Transplantation Gwendolyn B. Graybar, Lois L. Bready, 2012-12-06 This treatise commemorates the 32nd anniversary of the first successful allogenic kidney transplant in a human being and the beginning of a continuing challenge for well over a generation of anesthesiologists If comparisons can be permitted this epoch making event can be ranked with the first pulmonary lobectomy and subsequently the initial ligation of a patent ductus arteriosus in the late 1930s when thoracic and cardiac surgery began Was it merely a coincidence that brought these events to the fore so close upon one another after many years of ideation and frustration Not so according to Lewis Thomas for this was the time of medicine's second revolution its transformation from an empirical art into a powerfully effective science The remote Galenic conception of disease with its emphasis on disturbed body humors was about to be supplanted by effective therapeutics as signified by the introduction of the sulfonamides and antibiotics for the specific treatment of infection Anesthesiology had been dormant up to that era still relying upon a few agents more or less utilized from the beginning and purveyed by a handful of specialists who had not yet begun to ask the scientific questions necessary for their maturation into a bona fide discipline However anesthesiology was inevitably caught in the ferment for as Peter Caws observed It serves to remind us that the development of science is a step wise process nobody starts from scratch and nobody gets very far ahead of the rest
