Sacrificing The Forest Environmental And Social Struggle In Chiapas:

Sacrificing The Forest Karen O'brien, 2018-05-04 The Selva Lacandona of Chiapas Mexico has received a tremendous amount of attention since the Zapatista uprising began in 1994 Concerns have focused on both the rapid rate of deforestation in Mexico's largest tropical rain forest and the social marginalization of its inhabitants which is considered to be a root cause of the uprising In this book Karen O'Brien presents an insightful analysis of how deforestation and social struggles are related in this region and then considers the implications of these links for the remaining forest A critical analysis of deforestation rates and patterns in the Selva Lacandona region provides the point of departure for this study Using satellite imagery and her own field work O'Brien presents an original estimate of forest loss She then uses an approach derived from political ecology to trace the links between social processes and deforestation Instead of focusing exclusively on the driving forces of deforestation she argues that an analysis of the countervailing forces of conservation efforts is crucial to understanding the configuration of the present day forest and the conflicts that surround it Unless these forces can be fused O'Brien contends the future of the Selva Lacandona will continue to be shaped by the tensions among social economic and environmental objectives A valuable tool for scholars of deforestation environmental change and political ecology Sacrificing the Forest will also be of interest to readers trying to understand the current situation in Chiapas

Environmental Issues in Latin America and the Caribbean Aldemaro Romero, Sarah E. West, 2006-02-23 We began this book with a simple goal to assemble a collection of readings for an undergraduate interdisciplinary course taught by one of us AR at Macalester College This course explored environmental problems and solutions in Latin America and the Caribbean using both natural science and social science methods After a literature search failed to produce an anthology of interdisciplinary readings appropriate for the course we set out to compile one We sought papers that dealt with the most salient environmental problems in the region that were written by experts and that were appropriate for undergraduate students Most importantly we sought papers that clearly demonstrate the contributions that experts from one discipline can make to analysis in another discipline We sought papers that for example show how biological species assessments can be used to inform the politics of biodiversity conservation We sought papers that show how economic analysis can be used to predict the likely effects of human behavior on ecosystems We sought papers that pay close attention to how institutions both national and international affect the outcome of environmental initiatives To find essays that fit our needs we sent out a world wide call for papers chose the most promising submissions and subjected these submissions to peer review The twelve approved essays represent the work of researchers from Latin America and the Caribbean the United States Canada Europe and Australia All the authors have direct experience with Latin America and the Caribbean and the region's problems

New Frontiers of Land Control Nancy Lee Peluso, Christian Lund, 2013-09-13 Questions about land control have invigorated thinkers in agrarian studies and economic history since the nineteenth century Exclusion alienation expropriation dispossession and violence animate histories of land use property rights and territories More recently agrarian environments have been transformed by processes of de agrarianization urbanization migration and new forms of primitive accumulation Even the classic agrarian question of how the social relations of agriculture will be influenced by capitalism has been reformulated at critical historical moments reviving or producing new debates around the importance of land control The authors in this volume focus on new frontiers of land control and their active creation These frontiers are sites where established power relationships are challenged by new enclosures and property regimes producing new social and environmental dynamics in their stead Contributors examine labor and production processes engaged by new configurations of actors new agrarian and environmental subjects and the networks connecting them and new legal and violent means of challenging established or imminent land controls Overall we find that land control still matters though in changed degrees and manners Land control will continue to inspire struggles for a long time This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of

Mayan rain forest than Westerners realized and he points out that the very idea of the jungle is also deeply rooted though in different ways in the Western imagination Gollnick draws on theoretical innovations offered by subaltern studies to discover oral traces left by indigenous inhabitants in dominant cultural productions He explores both how the jungle region and its inhabitants have been represented in literary writings from the time of the Spanish conquest to the present and how the indigenous people have represented themselves in such works including post colonial and anti colonial narratives poetry video and photography His goal is to show how popular and elite cultures have interacted in creating depictions of life in the rain forest and to offer new critical vocabularies for analyzing forms of cross cultural expression
