made enduring contributions not only to our knowledge of the American West but also to our view of the region and its history. In many ways their writing set the standard for scholarship and interpretation and their influence is still felt today. Yet they were not flawless. As Gary Topping explains in this the first comprehensive appraisal of their work, each had serious shortcomings. DeVoto and Stegner, master storytellers, distorted their histories with excessive use of literary and artistic techniques. Morgan, the thorough researcher, failed to see larger contexts and interpretive possibilities. Brooks, courageous in finding damning new information on the Mountain Meadows massacre, stopped short of drawing conclusions that might alienate her from her fellow Mormons. And Brodie, psychobiographer extraordinaire, nonetheless succumbed to reading too much into the lives of her subjects based on her own emotions and conflicts. All five writers experienced Mormon Utah in the formative stages of their lives and whether they wanted to or not, fashioned their work on the American West under that indelible influence. Topping shows ultimately how, despite weaknesses, each created exemplary models of diligent research and narrative elegance while establishing new traditions in western historical scholarship.

To help you bring out your hidden talents. One of the banks in Canada is called Scotia Bank. It has a slogan that says you are richer than you think. Something and Nothingness John Neary, 1992. John Neary shows that the theological dichotomy of via negativa, which posits the authentic experience of God as absence, darkness, silence, and via affirmativa, which emphasizes presence, images, and the sounds of the earth, is an overlooked key to examining and comparing the works of John Fowles and John Updike. Drawing on his extensive knowledge of both Christian and secular existentialism within the modern theology of Barth and Levinas and the contemporary critical theory of Derrida and J. Hillis Miller, Neary demonstrates the ultimate affinity of these authors who at first appear such opposites. He makes clear that Fowles's postmodernist metafictional experiments reflect the stark existentialism of Camus and Sartre, while Updike's social realism recalls Kierkegaard's empirical faith in a generous God within a kind of Christian deconstructionism. Neary's perception of uncanny similarities between the two authors, whose respective careers are marked by a series of novels that structurally and thematically parallel each other and the authors' shared long-term interest in existentialism and theology, support both his critical comparison and his argument that neither author is philosophically more sophisticated nor aesthetically more daring.

A Summary of Mineral Industry Activity in Colorado ,1922 Information Circular ,1966 Divining Science Warren Dym, 2010-09-24 The study of German mining and metallurgy has focused overwhelmingly on labor capitalism and progressive engineering and earth science This book addresses prospecting practices and mining culture Using the divining or dowsing rod as a means of exposing miner beliefs it argues that a robust vernacular science preceded institutionalized geology in Saxony and that the Freiberg Mining Academy f 1765 became a site for the synthesis of tradition and new science The tacit knowledge of dowsing was the mark of the experienced prospector and rather than decline in importance through the Enlightenment the practice transformed from a study of mineral vapors into an experimental branch of geophysics
