airframe, alongside the F2-10 with which it shared its powerplant. The design's intention by the R&M was the small single-motors, but after some formal testing, Lockheed concluded that F2s would only require fuel and ultimately more space. Thus, the F2-10, its successor, acquired a single, centre fin and nozzles. Using as its fuel 11.5-lb (5.2 kg) per cent aqueous solution of hydrogen peroxide plus oxygenine as a stabiliser and 2-lb (0.9 kg) aqueous solution of sodium and potassium permanganate to promote decomposition, the Walter R 2000 motor was to propel the prototype at speeds of up to 3,000 mph (4,828 km/h). It was clear from the outset that this was a major achievement and Lockheed was ordered to Messerschmitt's Augsburg research centre with its research and development team in January 1945.

Then the F2-10 had been transformed into the Messerschmitt Me 163 'Komet'.

The Me 163 'Komet'

The 'Komet', which provided the projected Me 263 was similar to a little over two months, was a radical and adventurous approach to the problem of how to defeat the heavily armed and protected bomber aircraft which were flown in formations designed to create an impenetrable defence line. Its designation, all of them were decided by the R&M, is somewhat misleading. As Messerschmitt AG actually had little to do with its development, which remained in the hands of its creator. In the spring of 1941, the prototype of the new aircraft began gliding tests, flown to a height of 30,000 ft (9,144 m). It was soon achieving speeds of up to 3,000 mph (4,828 km/h) while showing a high degree of controllability, and during the summer it was sent to the rocket development establishment at Peenemünde where on the Baltic coast, to be fitted with a rocket motor – an improved model of the Walter R1 incorporating a degree of thrust control but retaining 11.5-lb and 2-lb as its fuel.

The development programme at Peenemünde was fraught with accidents, some fatal, as time after time the volatile fuels spontaneously exploded. On one occasion, an entire building was demolished; moreover, it also resulted in the Me 163 V1 breaking the world speed record repeatedly with the test pilot, Hans Olthaus, finally exceeding 3,000 mph (4,828 km/h), almost being killed in the process when the aircraft became suddenly uncontrollable as compression shock waves caused by airflow over the wing surface locally exceeding the speed of sound induced negative lift and massive vibration. In the event, Olthaus managed to regain control and land successfully. The R&M impressed, ordered prototypes of an operational aircraft, the Me 163, to be armed with a pair of MG 151 20mm (0.8in) cannon and powered by a more powerful R20-42 rocket motor using the compressed fuel/oxidisable combination of 11.5-lb and 2-lb (50 per cent hydrogen peroxide, 47 per cent methane, 11 per cent water as its fuel and producing 1000 kg (2,200 lb) of thrust. Around 2,000 tonnes (2 tons) of propellant very nearly had the entire weight of the aircraft was enough to take it to its operational ceiling of 30,000 ft (9,144 m) in 1.30 minutes, and the pilot then had a further four and a half minutes of powered flight available; thus, he would actually have been gliding, unpowered, during most of his mission.

Two Me 163s had been handed over to a special Luftwaffe unit early in 1942 to show pilot formation to high, though it was long before training actually commenced. The high landing speed of the 'Komet' (around 300 mph) combined with the fact that the pilot was committed to a slow take-off, leaving no power available to slow him to regain height for a second attempt, resulted in many accidents, most of them fatal. The first operational unit, equipped with Me 163s, was armed, with a pair of 20mm (0.8in) cannon in the wing roots and a considerable degree of armour protection for the pilot, began forming at Wehrmacht in May 1944, and the first went into action as a VJ-100 on 10 August. It proved to be a success some days later, when Luftwaffe Major had downed a B-17 near Leipzig. In all, some 200 Me 163s in various versions were constructed and eight by 6 week old to Japan, where the powered and over 50 powered versions were built before the war's end, but the aircraft was only a very limited success, according to its followers. For little more than 10 American B-17s. An improved version, known originally as the Ju 288, was produced at Jukos and then taken over by Messerschmitt as the Me 263. It was somewhat larger, had a wheeled undercarriage rather than skids, and was powered by a Walter R200 motor. It was produced in prototype form only.

The Selbstvernichtungsflieger

In fact, like the Me 263, the 'Komet' was too little, too late. Its development was the standard in Germany by the summer of 1944 that individual fighter pilots had been to training. After bombing, and until such as Ju 288 and Ju 288 were formed as Sturmgeschütz (assault) groups with that as an accepted role back to the using the 1944-1945 that with frontal attack. They had a measure of success between 1 July 1944 and the end of March 1945, when they ceased to operate. They accounted for around 300 Allied bombers, but only 10 of them by training. In April 1945, Sturmgeschütz 130 was formed from volunteers, they trained for 10 days in training tactics, and then went into action, in all, they trained and downed eight, but at a high cost in themselves, a total of 11 of 1944 and the 1945. It was potentially self-sufficient Selbstvernichtungsflieger was to be employed, then clearly a much less sophisticated aircraft, using the in the way of strategic resources, could be employed instead of some of the best pilot-trained fighters of the entire period.

At the point we need to take a very short detour to consider the nature of Selbstvernichtungsflieger. It was never the stated intention to require it even at some to control suitable in Germany in the way that it was in Japan, and great pains were taken to maintain that the very design was actually the case. The Selbstvernichtungsflieger were expected only to employ their aircraft as weapons in the last resort (though mostly to the Sturmgeschütz were required to take on both that they would indeed do this if necessary, and to make every effort to ensure that the attack off them with the possibility of escape. As all of the initial effort (including the Me 263) 1944,

The Secret War for the Middle East Youssef Aboul-Enein, 2013-10-15 It can be argued that the Middle East during the World War II has been regarded as that conflict's most overlooked theater of operations Though the threat of direct Axis invasion never materialized beyond the Egyptian Western Desert with Rommel's Afrika Korps this did not limit the Axis from probing the Middle East and cultivating potential collaborators and sympathizers These actions left an indelible mark in the socio political evolution of the modern states of the Middle East This book explores the infusion of the political language of anti-Semitism nationalism fascism and Marxism that were among the ideological byproducts of Axis and Allied intervention in the Arab world The status of British dominated Middle East was tailor made for exploitation by Axis intelligence and propaganda German and Italian intelligence efforts fueled anti British resentments their influence shaped the course of Arab nationalist sentiments throughout the Middle East A relevant parallel to the pan Arab cause was Hitler's attempt to bring ethnic Germans into the fold of a greater German state In theory as the Sudeten German stood on par with the Carpathian German so too according to doctrinal theory did the Yemeni stand in union with the Syrian in the imagination of those espousing pan Arabism As historic evidence demonstrates this very commonality proved to be a major factor in the development of relations between Arab and Fascist leaders The Arab nationalist movement amounted to nothing more than a shapeless fragmented counter position to British imperialism imported to the Arab East via Berlin for Nazi aspirations

Serbia's Secret War Philip J. Cohen, 1996 An entire piece of Serbian history is missing And in the middle of the latest Yugoslav war Europe's worst blood bath since World War II Serbian politicians propagandists and revisionist historians have made a cynical attempt at replacing the missing piece by rewriting the Holocaust record They claim that Serbs were not Nazi collaborators in genocide but purely victims of the same atrocities that befell the Jews and that Serbian aspirations for a Greater Serbia are not driven by a murderous nationalistic hatred but rather are propelled by a victim's desire to lay claim to a safe homeland a Serbian Promised Land Thus has the current spilling of blood been justified Philip J Cohen argues that the existence of such a propaganda campaign emanating from Belgrade began in the earliest days of the post World War II era and since then has been reflected in the world media as well as in popular commentary and scholarly analysis More astonishing is that this campaign has been widely successful particularly in Israel Remarkable for its broad portrayal and penetrating examination of the Yugoslav social and political experience Serbia s Secret War draws heavily on documents that have been previously unavailable to the West Some of the written record has been translated and is published here for the first time Destined to be regarded as an important contribution to the field Cohen s careful study of the Serbian role in the Second World War will dramatically alter how scholars policy makers and the general public view the bloodshed in the former Yugoslavia and how they will come to understand the reasons behind it The Secret War with Iran Ronen Bergman,2008-09-09 For twenty six years Iran has waged an international terrorist war while the intelligence services of the West led by Mossad and the CIA have waged a relentless mostly clandestine counter jihad in return Though Iran has become a quietly looming threat little has been revealed about this intelligence based war Now Ronen Bergman Israel s leading reporter and analyst of intelligence affairs has written a full account of this secret war He connected the dots of the long history of Iranian backed terrorist attacks and revealed for the first time many classified operations against the Iranian terrorist network including details about collaborations between Israel s Mossad and the CIA and FBI thrilling Mossad operations the successful recruitment of top insiders of Iranian intelligence who have disclosed a wealth of information about Iran s nuclear program as well as it s terrorist activities and the use of ultra sophisticated surveillance equipment to penetrate and damage Iranian targets From the Iranian proxy Hizbollah s planning of terrorists attacks from apartments in New York City to Iran s training of an army of work Iraqi insurgents in the techniques of suicide bombing and the making of improvised explosive devises he showed Iran has steadily waged war against the West Secret War in Shanghai Bernard Wasserstein,2017-02-28 In this classic account Bernard Wasserstein draws on the files of the Shanghai Police as well as the intelligence archives of the many countries involved to provide the definitive story of Shanghai s secret war Bernard Wasserstein introduces the British American and Australian individuals who collaborated with the Axis powers as well as subversive warfare operatives battling the Japanese and one another At times both shocking and amusing this book lifts the lid on the bizarre underworld of the sin city of the Orient during its most enthralling period in history
