Nursing Support for Families of Dying Patients Rosemary

McIntyre, 2001-11-28 When a patient has an advanced disease considerable demands are placed on the whole family. Whilst coping with their own profound emotions close relatives commonly have to support their loved ones through a range of treatments as the disease progresses through stages of remission and recurrence until finally a shift to a palliative mode of treatment must be faced. In such situations family roles and relationships are likely to be disrupted and family members coping resources can be stretched to the limit. It is clear from this that by the time the terminal stage of the patient's illness is reached the family may have travelled a long and difficult road and close relatives are likely to be emotionally vulnerable and in need of support. This study explores the needs of relatives of terminally ill patients and the concerns of nurses who provide care in the hospital. The research data is used to design, implement and evaluate clinical standards for improved family support.

Handbook of Death and Dying

Clifton D. Bryant, 2003-10 Dying is a social as well as physiological phenomenon. Each society characterizes and consequently treats death and dying in its own individual ways, ways that differ markedly. These particular patterns of death and dying engender modal cultural responses and such institutionalized behavior has familiar economical, educational, religious and political implications. The Handbook of Death and Dying takes stock of the vast literature in the field of thanatology, arranging and synthesizing what has been an unwieldy body of knowledge into a concise yet comprehensive reference work. This two volume handbook will provide direction and momentum to the study of death related behavior for many years to come.

Key Features: More than 100 contributors representing authoritative expertise in a diverse array of disciplines: Anthropology, Family Studies, History, Law, Medicine, Mortuary Science, Philosophy, Psychology, Social work, Sociology, Theology. A distinguished editorial board of leading scholars and researchers in the field. More than 100 definitive essays covering almost every dimension of death related behavior. Comprehensive and inclusive exploring concepts and social patterns within the larger topical concern. Journal article length essays that address topics with appropriate detail. Multidisciplinary and cross cultural coverage.
