Humans, Animals, and U.S. Society in the Long Nineteenth Century: A Documentary History Dominik Ohrem, 2025-11-18 Volume V covers three key areas of interaction and concern that shaped Americans' relations with wild animals. The sources in section one focus on hunting a practice that among early republicans was still associated with the savage existence of Indigenous peoples and regarded as incompatible with the agrarian virtues they deemed essential yet which eventually became emblematic of settler identity and masculinity and tangled up in the politics of race and class. The second section examines practices and sites of animal display: natural history museums, zoological gardens and circus menageries for commercial or educational purposes, highlighting the evolution of such displays from the private collections and traveling exhibitions of the early republican and antebellum decades into significant institutions that shaped American perceptions of wild animals. A third section discusses the growing awareness of anthropogenic species extinction in U.S. society, focusing especially on the dramatic decline of the American bison and the passenger pigeon and the cultural and political responses to these losses, tracing a long nineteenth-century arc that began with opposition to the very idea of extinction and concluded with Progressive Era campaigns that managed to save the bison from the brink but amounted to too little too late for the pigeon.

Imitation and Social Learning in Robots, Humans and Animals Christopher L. Nehaniv, Kerstin Dautenhahn, 2009-04-09 Mechanisms of imitation and social matching play a fundamental role in development, communication, interaction, learning and culture. Their investigation in different agents: animals, humans and robots has significantly influenced our understanding of the nature and origins of social intelligence. Whilst such issues have traditionally been studied in areas such as psychology, biology and ethnology, it has become increasingly recognised that a constructive approach towards imitation and social learning via the synthesis of artificial agents can provide important insights into mechanisms and create artefacts that can be instructed and taught by imitation, demonstration and social interaction rather than by explicit programming. This book studies increasingly sophisticated models and mechanisms of social matching behaviour and marks an important step towards the development of an interdisciplinary research field, consolidating and providing a valuable reference for the increasing number of researchers in the field of imitation and social learning in robots, humans and animals.
