The Future of Predictive Safety Evaluation A.N. Worden,D.V. Parke,J. Marks,2012-12-06 Reproduction and fetal development in humans and experimental animals may be adversely affected by a wide range of drugs and environmental agents They may be toxic in the parental generation leading to impaired germ cell formation loss of reproductive potential and infertility following chronic exposure Deviant fetal development occurs as a consequence of cellular damage at sensitive stages in development Changes seen range from intrauterine mortality and structural malformation to growth retardation with physiological and behavioural defects Concepts on the mechanism of action of teratogens are discussed with reference to some better known agents Presently regulatory authorities prefer whole animal studies in predictive safety evaluation of substances to which a pregnant woman may be exposed Tests are conducted over one or more generations and are designed to study the influence of test compounds upon general reproductive performance fertility fetal development and perinatal and postnatal behaviour Experiments are designed to permit compounds to be tested under conditions resembling expected human exposure Small rodents and rabbits are preferred species on account of their convenience as laboratory animals and the available knowledge regarding their reproductive behaviour fetal development and known sensitivity to human teratogens
