Preventing Genocide Scott R. Feil, Carnegie Commission on Preventing Deadly Conflict, 1998 THE EXPERIENCE IN Rwanda was a watershed for the international community the United Nations the contributors to the United Nations Assistance Mission for Rwanda and least of all myself However no one noticed that it was a watershed at the time It was seen as too difficult and not of sufficient interest and value to prevent the outbreak of violence and once violence had broken out it still was not of sufficient interest to warrant the expense of resources and risk of more casualties to stop the violence from spreading While others remained focused on the world's other crises the people of Rwanda were forgotten It was not really until the international community noticed tens of thousands of refugees in eastern Zaire with thousands dying daily of cholera that they felt truly compelled to act This three month delay cost the lives of hundreds of thousands of innocent Rwandans and countless scars and disfigurements for those who lived through the horrors Like the crisis at the time the need for a response mechanism and the consequences of not looking for solutions are guaranteeing the recurrence of other humanitarian catastrophes now and into the future
