

L9 Psycholinguistics: Reading models – evidence from neuropsychology

Full model of reading

- Not just word recognition, but also from letters on a page/screen to speech.
- Reading predictable words out loud
 - Pronunciation is predictable based on how the word is spelled
 - E.g. "sat", "speak" (called regular words)
- Reading unpredictable words out loud
 - Pronunciation is not predictable based on how the word is spelled
 - E.g. "yacht", "steak" (called irregular words)
- Reading new words
 - In experiments we use 'nonwords' (nonsense words)
 - Nonwords are letter strings which aren't real words

Two types:
Pronounceable (e.g. Chotef)
Unpronounceable (e.g. rpteeof)

Lexical route: if you were to skip from the orthographic input lexicon to phonological output lexicon, it would involve just reading the word without understanding what it means.

Evidence for these routes:

Neuropsychology – brain damage patients

If part of the dual-model is damaged:

- Can only study individual cases not groups of patients
 - If patient A has damage that is different from patient B we can't average their performance
- Study both accuracy and errors

Horning, 1993 This book reviews research in linguistics psychology reading and writing and brings this work to bear on the problem of readable writing The research supports the theory that two factors in text are crucial to its readable quality psycholinguistic redundancy and cohesion The book also reports the results of three empirical studies and a case study that further illustrates this theory The findings have important theoretical and practical implications because they shed light on the nature of reading and writing processes from both linguistic and psychological perspectives and suggest practical approaches to the production and comprehension of readable writing The book also draws on research in second language acquisition and is pertinent to readable writing in both first and second languages The Psychology of Reading Paula J. Schwanenflugel, Nancy Flanagan Knapp, 2015-11-05 Incorporating cognitive neuropsychological and sociocultural perspectives this authoritative text explains the psychological processes involved in reading and describes applications for educational practice The book follows a clear developmental sequence from the impact of the early family environment through the acquisition of emergent literacy skills and the increasingly complex abilities required for word recognition reading fluency vocabulary growth and text comprehension Linguistic and cultural factors in individual reading differences are examined as are psychological dimensions of reading motivation and the personal and societal benefits of reading Pedagogical Features End of chapter discussion questions and suggestions for further reading Explicit linkages among theory research standards including the Common Core State Standards and instruction Engaging case studies at the beginning of each chapter Technology Toolbox explores the pros and cons of computer assisted learning Leavis and Lonergan Joseph Fitzpatrick, 2021-02-11 This book illustrates the value of the cross fertilisation of literary criticism with philosophy something Leavis advocated in his later writings Lonergan's epistemology of Critical Realism supports Leavis's account of how we reach a valid judgment concerning the worth of a poem or literary text and his exploration of the relationship between subjectivity and objectivity illustrates how close engagement with serious literature can be considered morally beneficial something Leavis passionately believed in

Leavis and Lonergan are at one in providing convincing arguments against Cartesian dualism and the dominant positivist philosophies of their times And Leavis s method and practice as a literary critic which he developed independently of Lonergan exemplify Lonergan s epistemology as applied to literature and in this way illustrate its versatility and fruitfulness
