Accounts,2011-12-20 The Commons Public Accounts Committee publishes its 61st Report of the Session which on the basis of evidence from the Cabinet Office and HM Revenue and Customs HMRC examined tax disputes At 31 March 2011 HM Revenue Customs was seeking to resolve tax issues valued at over 25 billion with large companies some of which included disputes over outstanding tax In this report the Committee expresses concern about how the Department handled some cases involving large settlements and that there needs to be proper separation between the negotiation of tax settlements and the authorization of such settlements The Committee also states that HMRC made matters worse by trying to avoid scrutiny of these settlements keeping confidential the details of specific settlements with large companies This effects Parliament s ability to establish value for money compounded further by imprecise inconsistent and potentially misleading answers given by senior departmental officials including the Permanent Secretary for Tax in particular over his evidence on his relationship with Goldman Sachs in facilitating a settlement with the company over their tax dispute HMRC governance processes in these matters were inconsistent and it has now appointed two new Commissioners with tax expertise and plans to introduce a new assessor role to permit independent review of large settlements before they are finalised The Committee further states that it saw little evidence of personal accountability within the Department and that a perception has developed that large companies are treated more favourably receiving preferential treatment compared to small businesses and individuals

Jeremy Bentham and Australia Tim Causer, Margot Finn, Philip Schofield, 2022-04-28 Jeremy Bentham and Australia is a collection of scholarship inspired by Bentham's writings on Australia. These writings are available for the first time in authoritative form in Panopticon versus New South Wales and other writings on Australia, a volume in The Collected Works of Jeremy Bentham published by UCL Press. In the present collection, a distinguished group of authors reflect on Bentham's Australian writings, making original contributions to existing debates and setting agendas for future ones. In the first part of the collection, the works are placed in their historical contexts, while the second part provides a critical assessment of the historical accuracy and plausibility of Bentham's arguments against transportation from the British Isles. In the third part, attention turns to Bentham's claim that New South Wales had been illegally founded and to the imperial and colonial constitutional ramifications of that claim. Here, authors also discuss Bentham's work of 1831 in which he supports the establishment of a free colony on the southern coast of Australia. In the final part, authors shed light on the history of Bentham's panopticon penitentiary scheme, his views on the punishment and reform of criminals, and what role, if any, religion had to play in that regard, and discuss apparently panopticon-inspired institutions built in the Australian colonies. This collection will appeal to readers interested in Bentham's life and thought, the history of transportation from the British Isles, and of British penal policy, more generally colonial and imperial history, Indigenous history, legal and constitutional history, and religious history.

Mackintosh's The Government and Politics of Britain Peter G. Richards, 2012-09-10 This student mainstay continues to be organised around constitutional themes, with new material on local elections, the politics of the centre, and the limits of state power. Essential for all introductory students of British politics and current affairs.

Reform in the House of Commons Michael Jogerst, 2021-10-21 One of the most significant changes in the British House of Commons has been the development in 1979 of a system of select committees charged with monitoring government ministries. Unlike previous experiments in parliamentary reform, these committees are staffed exclusively with backbench MPs who regularly review executive policies and offer recommendations. Michael Jogerst reappraises the relationship between the executive and legislative branches in light of these new circumstances, which are likely to affect the entire governmental structure of the United Kingdom.

House of Commons - Public Administration Select Committee: Truth to Power: How Civil Service Reform Can Succeed - HC 74 Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Public Administration Select Committee, 2013-09-06 The Public Administration Select Committee (PASC) has concluded a year-long inquiry into the future of the Civil Service with only one recommendation that Parliament should establish a Joint Committee of both Houses to sit as a Commission on the future of the Civil Service. It should be constituted within the next few months and report before the end of the Parliament with a comprehensive change programme for Whitehall with a timetable to be implemented over the lifetime of the next Parliament. The Report considers the increased tensions between ministers and officials which have become widely reported and places the problems in Whitehall in a wider context of a Civil Service built on the Northcote Trevelyan settlement established in 1853 and the Haldane principles of ministerial accountability set out in 1919 The government's Civil Service Reform Plan lacks strategic coherence and clear leadership from a united team of ministers and officials The Northcote Trevelyan Civil Service remains the most effective way of supporting the democratically elected Government and future administrations in the UK Divided leadership and confused accountabilities in Whitehall have led to problems a low level of engagement amongst civil servants in some departments and agencies and a general lack of trust and openness the Civil Service exhibits the key characteristics of a failing organisation with the leadership are in denial about the scale of the challenge they face There is a persistent lack of key skills and capabilities across Whitehall and an unacceptably high level of churn of lead officials which is incompatible with good government
